Condry Planning To Go Back Again

Tom Condry, A&M senior in the tour portion of the Experiagricultural economics from An- ment, he and 10 other Experigleton, has found his place in the world - down under.

He's set his sights on working with an agricultural firm in Australia.

Tom, who will be 22 this month, believes he will just naturally gravitate back to the world's smallest continent (or largest island, depending on viewpoint) where he spent last summer through the Experiment in International Living.

Designed to promote international good will on the premise that a person best learns to understand another people by living among them, EIL in Condry's case won him to the Aussies, lock, stock and barrel.

The majority of A&M's Experimenters over recent years say they would like to re-visit the countries and their families.

Condry vows he will — to live and work.

"When we got off the plane in Hawaii on the way home, I wanted to get on another plane tralia," he grinned. and go back," he remarked.

Tom, the only 1969 A&M Experimenter who didn't go to Europe, lived with Mr. and Mrs. Tom Saunderson at Leeton in New South Wales, about 300 miles west of Sydney and the same distance north of Melbourne. On

The Memorial Student Center Travel Committee and Senior MSC Council member said benefits from the trip, other than finding his future, included "enrichment of my own life, the opportunity to meet people and work out U.S. visits with two friends I made there."

He also made jaunts to New Zealand and the Fiji Islands.

A&M students interested in finding out more about EIL may meet with the Travel Committee in the MSC Tuesday. Ernest Johnson of Weatherford, who was an experimenter to Poland, and Gary Martin of Houston, who went to Sweden, will have a slide presentation.

Condry suspects the experience will motivate him.
