Leading Geographer Aids A&M Department

Dr. Carl O. Sauer, generally regarded one of the world's leading geographers, is helping members of the university's new Geography Department establish a graduate program.

The retired chairman of the Geography Department at the University of California will spend most of this month on campus, noted Dr. Edwin B. Doran Jr., department head here.

In conjunction with Sauer's work here, Texas A&M hosted a "Cultural Geography in Texas" conference in his honor. The conference, which included a seminar by Prof. Sauer, attracted professors from throughout the state.

Doran described Dr. Sauer as the "most distinguished geographer in the world." Both Doran and Dr. George F. Carter, A&M's distinguished professor of geography, studied for their Ph.D. degrees under Sauer.

Texas A&M received authorization last fall from the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, to form a separate Geography Department offering all three levels of academic degrees. The university previously operated a combined Geology and Geography Department.

Davenport to Speak On "American Mind"

"The American Mind" will be the topic of a lecture by Dr. Manuel M. Davenport, head of the Department of Philosophy and Humanities, scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Sunday in Room 2A of the MSC.

Davenport, appointed department head in 1967, last year received a Distinguished Faculty-Student Relations Award.

Before coming to A&M, Davenport taught 10 years at Colorado State University, where faculty members voted him a Distinguished Service Award for excellence in teaching and students elected him "Top Prof."

Alpha Delta Sigma Tops in Nation

Texas A&M's chapter of Alpha Delta Sigma, professional advertising fraternity, has been named the year's outstanding student chapter in the nation.

According to the fall issue of the ADS Linage magazine, A&M tied for first with the chapter of the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

The Aggies finished second to Texas Tech in the competition last year and moved into first place this year with a score of 97 out of a possible 100 points.

Journalism senior Bruce Shulter was the president of the local chapter last year and Jack Bogan, former Journalism Department assistant professor, was the adviser.

Shulter said projects last year included hosting the regional ADS convention, and selling basketball programs and bumper stickers.

National competition, Shulter said, was based on chapter membership, status of the chapter treasury and projects undertaken for the furthering of advertising education.

Dick Horner, management major from Lonview, is ADS president this year.

Dinner Wednesday For Scout Leaders

Arrowmoon District, the scouting community of the Bryan-College Station-Hearne complex, will hold its Annual Appreciation Dinner, a covered dish affair for Adult Scouters and Friends of Adult Scouters, at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Lamar Junior High School Cafeteria.

Bill Scott, chairman of the appreciation dinner, asked those attending to bring a prepared covered dish of food for part of the evening's menu. No other charge will be required, he said.

Guest speaker will be Jack Linn, lay assistant to the Rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church of Pasadena. Scott described him as a "long-time friend of scouts and scouting, noting that Linn has served as district scout executive for the Arrowmoon District.

3 M.E. Professors To Attend Confab

Three faculty members from the Mechanical Engineering Department will attend the annual winter meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in Los Angeles Nov. 16-20.

Dr. C. M. Simmang, department head and past chairman of the National Mechanical Engineering Department Heads Committee, will lead the A&M representatives.

Dr. J. George H. Thompson, chairman of the Membership Committee, Metals Engineering Division, and Dr. M. P. Boyce also will attend. Dr. Boyce will present a research paper entitled "Fluid Flow Phenomena in Dusty Air" during the Nov. 17 session.

Marine Ball Set For Sunday

The Semper Fidelis Society will sponsor a Marine Corps Birthday Ball Sunday in celebration of the Corps' 194th anniversary the following day.

Thomas W. Hoysa, commanding officer of the A&M chapter of the Marine Corps' national collegiate organization, said the ball will be conducted at 7:30 p.m. in the American Legion Hall on State Highway 21.

Hoysa, a senior from Nashau, N. H., said all former Marines in the Bryan-College Station area are invited.

The Semper Fidelis Society is composed primarily of students seeking commissions in the Marine Corps through the Platoon Leaders Class (PLC) Program.

In reference to Vietnam, Schriever said that he believed the President was following the only honorable course available to the American people.

The general also attacked the American news media.

"The media relate to the East Coast intellectual community," he said, "and therefore follow the same line of thought. As a result, there is discord in the country because the nation is influenced by the articulate minority."

"I wish I could answer that," Schriever said in answer to a question concerning how the mass

Student Hurt In Accident

Charles Jones, an A&M senior from Bryan, received facial lacerations and assorted cuts in a motorcycle-automobile accident at Main, Lamar and Jones Streets at about 6 p.m. Thursday.

Jones was taken to St. Joseph Hospital in Bryan for treatment. He was then transferred to University Hospital where he was reported as being in good condition.

According to Sgt. W. O. Walker of Campus Security, the investigating officer, the cycle was proceeding west down Main Street when it collided with a car driven by Judith Sadefer, also a student at A&M. Riding on the cycle but uninjured was John Winters, senior from Bryan.

media could be brought to assume a more middle-of-the-road attitude. "I don't know. I don't think it is possible. At this time, I don't think they will."

"I think the anti-Vietnam war stand the newsmen are taking will cease to exist if things go well with the President's plans," he added.

"Some of the media people, in my opinion, are hopeless, they are so far to the left on every issue. I don't think we can ever switch them to the middle of the road," the general asserted.

A&M President Earl Rudder, attending the speech with his wife, asked Schriever after the speech:

"We find ourselves drifting away from the will to win; how do we reverse this thing?"

"It is difficult," Schriever replied. "There is so much confusion in the youth of the country who can't have much respect for the leadership when we carry on the way we do. I just hope the President can get support."
