Revised Directory Now Available

Revised student sections of the 1969-70 Texas A&M University Directory will be available Friday, announced University Information Director Jim Lindsey. Lindsey said the supplements will be issued free of charge to persons presenting coupons printed on Page 175 of the basic directory.

The coupons can be redeemed at the Student Publications Department in the Services Building or the Exchange Store.

Lindsey emphasized the revised student section is not for sale independently. It can only be purchased in conjunction with the basic directory, which is still available, he explained.

Listings in the revised section reflect late enrollments and changes in residence hall room assignments, Lindsey noted.

Laundry Bundle Change Announced

A change in the A&M Laundry's bundle policy will allow the substitution of fatigue jackets of Cadet Corps members or laboratory coats of veterinary students for regular shirts.

Howard Perry, director of civilian student activities, said the policy change, approved by the University Laundry Committee, will allow two lab coats or two fatigue jackets to be sent at no extra charge; or a combination of one lab or fatigue jacket and two shirts; or five shirts and no jackets.

Any excess of shirts or jackets, Perry said, will be charged at 10 cents per shirt and 25 cents per jacket, using the least expensive item for the excess charge.

Perry said the change was made because the two items are required for certain areas of instruction.

Dr. Timm Receives TFB Service Award

Dr. Tyrus R. Timm, head of the Agricultural Economics and Sociology Department, was presented the Texas Farm Bureau Distinguished Service Award during a recent TFB Convention in San Antonio.

The highest honor given by the Texas Farm Bureau, the award has been presented to only four previous recipients during the entire 36-year history of the state farm organization.

Tim is in charge of all resident instruction, research and Extension work of his 50-member department. He received his BS and MS degrees at Texas A&M and a doctorate in public administration at Harvard University. He has also done graduate work at Iowa State University.

Sidney Dean of Victoria, TFB president, said Timm's contributions to education and agriculture have earned him more than 13 major awards and honors. He has contributed 25 articles to popular and technical publications.

ON OTHER CAMPUSES

By Monty Stanley
University of Texas students last week voted in a referendum on whether or not non-students will be allowed to use Texas Union facilities in the future. The necessity for the decision came about a little over a week ago, after it had been announced that the Union cafeteria, the Chuck Wagon, would be open only to TU students, faculty, and guests accompanying them. The student day manager stood at the entrance of the restaurant checking identification, and was pushed aside by one entering patron, a former student, who had none. When asked to leave, he refused. He then resisted the campus security police when they arrived, and finally two additional officers were called in to help arrest the man.

Students' opinions on the matter varied from one extreme to the other. Some felt that it was about time they did something about the problem which helped overcrowding in the place, while others felt that since the university affects the city and is supported by the state, anyone should have a right to come there.

Among those who were refused service were several Texas exes, who even presented their Ex-Students' Association cards but were still denied admission.

The Student Assembly at TU appropriated $150 which it gave to the Student Mobilization Committee for advertising in the Daily Texan. A restraining order was issued by the Austin district court, and the money ordered back into SA funds by the House of Delegates.

A fashion store near Tarrant County Junior College is called the Thread Shed.

At the University of Florida, only 471 students, or slightly more than two percent of the total enrollment of 21,000 for the fall quarter, have elected to take courses on a pass-fail basis. The light turnout, according to the Florida Alligator, was not unexpected, as there has never been over three to five percent participation in the program, according to one of the assistant deans. However, this figure may not be an accurate indication of interest in or value of the program. Because of the requirements which must be met by the student in order to sign up for a pass-fail course, many students are ineligible for the program. In addition, many schools in the university system will not accept students on the pass-fail basis.

The editor of the University of Florida yearbook has threatened to drop the junior class section from the Seminole's pages if more students don't show up to have their pictures taken.

The activities of the University of Houston Scuba Club include diving in the University Center fountain, often used like a wishing well, to collect money for the United Fund. Their first effort netted $30.

Officials at Baldwin House, an independently owned dormitory at the U of H, have warned its residents that they are expected by their residency contract to shave regularly ("occasional lapses must not be prolonged or become habit"), and that haircuts must be kept trim and clean and combed. Unshaven residents, say the officials, will not be served the designated meals.

The Black Studies Department at San Francisco State College is doing so well that president S. I. Hayakawa is in kind of a jam. According to a CPS report, the flourishing department is autonomous and is headed by a man fired in June by Hayakawa. More than 1,000 students are enrolled for its courses.

The Faculty Senate Committee of SMU has reversed the earlier announced decision that a symposium on drug use and abuse planned last spring be cancelled. An invitation will be re-extended to drug proponent Timothy Leary, who will support the drug use side. His speech will be followed the next night by an assembly on the dangers of drug abuse.

The battle isn't over yet, however, because the second assembly will be addressed by two speakers, as opposed to Leary's single performance.

TIME

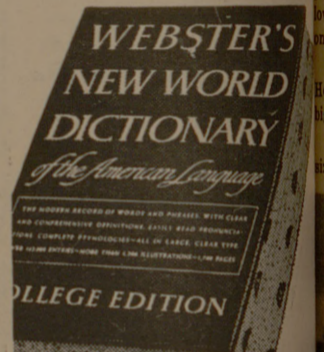

The longest word in the language?

By letter count, the longest word may be pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanococcus, a rare lung disease. You will find it in Webster's New World Dictionary, College Edition. You will find more useful information about words than in any other desk dictionary.

Take the word time. In addition to its derivation and illustration showing U.S. time zones, you'll find 48 clear definitions of the different meanings of time and 27 idiomatic uses, such as time of one's life. In sum, everything you want to know about time.

This dictionary is approved and used by more than 100 colleges and universities. In it time you owned one? Only $6.50 for 1760 pages; $7.50 thumb-indexed.
