

AGGIE BONFIRE

HEAVE AWAY, BOYS

Many towels, pairs of gloves, and other assorted materials were used to protect Aggie bodies during the cutting duration. This year's cutting area was located south of the campus near the Texas International Speedway. (Photo by Bill Hathaway)

GUIDING ONE INTO THE CORE LEVEL

Fightin' Fox freshmen tote a log into the main core level. The crews were rewarded every now and then with a five-minute break after several hours of work. (Photo by Bob Stump)

HANDS ON TOP! CLEAR!

A Corps outfit loads one of the semi-trailer trucks that several of the trucking firms in the Bryan-College Station area generously donated for use during Bonfire Week. (Photo by Bill Hathaway)

WAITING FOR A LOG

Fourth stack workers take a break while the ground crews prepare another log to send up to their lofty perch. Footing of the fourth story sometimes got down to the nitty gritty as logs approached their final resting place. (Photo by Mike Wright)

EASY DOES IT

Second stack workers guide a log into place during Monday's drizzle. As is usually the case, it rained at the start of the project, but the distracting droplets did little to damage the enthusiasm and spirit of the work. (Photo by Bob Stump)

Credits

Layout Editor: Mike Wright
 Photographers: Bob Stump, Mike Wright, and Bill Hathaway