

ROPES, PULLEYS, CRANE, AND AGGIE

An Aggie guides a log into place that has been lifted by a boom crane. He used several means of getting logs to the top tiers. Besides the crane, a series of pulleys and ropes were needed to hoist the timber into place. (Photo by Mike Wright)

REST FOR THE WEARY

A log sometimes makes the best bed, especially when the rest of the area is a sea of sticky, gooey, and gritty mud. Here a stacker catches a few winks between logs. (Photo by Bob Stump)

THINK TIME

"Chainsaw Man" takes time to try to figure out a way to trim logs quicker, and takes a few more minutes to gather his breath during the final two-day rush to complete the spirit stack. (Photo by Bill Hathaway)

THE NIGHT GUARD DOES ITS THING

Many good stories are repeated over the guard fires during the nights preceding the Wednesday night light-off. The Aggies were determined that the Bonfire would not be set prematurely by fellow students or anyone else. (Photo by Bill Mathaway)
