FROM THE PRESSBOX

by Richard Campbell

I knew Mike DeNiro. Yes, I knew Mike DeNiro. Not the ordinary, backslapping way but in a way that is far more accurate. I knew what he stood for and how he stood for it.

This slump-shouldered football jock was in one of my classes when I was a junior, and more often than not his seat in class was empty as the semester wore on. This was okay, though, because he was a freshman football star and everyone expected them to have a hard time making classes during (Continued on Page 5)

AT HIS BEST

4 Aggies Named To Academic Team

All Southwest Conference defensive backs Dave Elmendorf of Texas A&M and Terry Stewart of Arkansas head the 1969 SWC All-Academic team announced Saturday.

The two full offensive and defensive squads, plus eight honorable mention players, represent every school in the conference.

Elmendorf, the Aggie football and baseball standout, holds a near perfect 3.9 grade point average out of a possible 4.0. Stewart maintained a 3.52 average in chemical engineering while playing a leading role in Arkansas' outstanding season that was capped by an appearance in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day. Stewart also won the NCAA District 6 (Southwestern U. S.) scholar-athlete scholarship for post-graduate study.

Arkansas and A&M also had the greatest representation on the 22-man first team with four each. TCU, Baylor and SMU placed three each, Texas and Rice two each and Texas Tech one.

Others who were consensus all-conference as well as all-academic are Bill Burnett, Arkansas' record-setting touchdown producer and the Southwest Conference's leading rusher in 1969; TCU guard James Ray, who maintained a 3.2 average in math; and A&M linebacker Buster Adami, who holds a 3.2 political science average and won the 1969 Kern Tipps Award, given for scholarship, athletics and citizenship.

Other players who averaged 3.5 or better (the equivalent of an "A" average) were Rice quarterback Stahle Vincent, 3.5 in commerce; and A&M tackle Randy Maddox, 3.5 in economics. Steve Lubbehusen of A&M had a 3.1 in finance.

Sophomore quarterbacks also proved as adept in the classroom as on the field. In addition to Vincent, his teammate Phillip Wood was honorable mention and TCU's Steve Judy made the first offensive team with a 3.07 average in Business.

Texas' national championship Longhorns contributed two players to the defensive unit—architectural engineering major Bill Zapalac, an outstanding defensive end who maintained a 3.3 average, and linebacker Scott Henderson, 3.2 in government.

Business proved the most popular field among the scholar-athletes with eight of the first teamers in that field. There are three math majors, three in the sciences and engineering, and one each in economics, pre-med, physical education, liberal arts, government, anthropology and political science. And one, Dicky Grigg, is a two-day performer off the field, majoring in both math and physics.
