Architecture Students Page 4 Plan Brushey House

found trying to help people can be a frustrating experience.

Early in February 14 environmental design students of Asst. Prof. J. W. Wood decided to build a small house for a lowincome family burned out at Christmas time.

Wood agreed, realizing the students would learn more about people and building problems from the experience than they could ever learn in a classroom.

"What happened was even more than I expected," Wood declared.

A six-member family in the Brushey Community west of the campus was selected. The home had burned in December due to faulty wiring, common in lowincome housing areas.

Wood said the first problem was financing the materials, since labor would be provided by the students and volunteers from the community.

The students wanted the family to provide most of the funds. "It is the students' philosophy that if the family has a strong

> Staff members at the Farmers Home Administration office in Bryan are enthusiastic, Wood pointed out, and agreed to finance the student project if the family's application was accepted.

"The Farmers Home Administration people here are going out on a limb for us," Wood declared. He said FHA in the past has only financed homes built by contrac-

Wood gave the students a choice of dropping the project or securing materials from donations. They wanted to continue. "I wanted the guys to find out themselves how people felt about involvement," Wood point-"They ran up against some strong opinions. A couple of times they felt quite rejected. They ran into some extremely

"For many, it was the first time they came face to face with these attitudes, although they may have read or heard about them," Wood says.

The students contacted hundreds of sources, but received encouragement or minimal aid from less than five per cent of the contacts.

A presentation to the Houston A&M Club boosted spirits. Cash contributions and help from former students in the building trades industry resulted. Wood said the majority of peo-project felt "those people are getting something for nothing."

"We are getting an educational experience," Wood declared. "It's a fair exchange." Today, the students still do not have enough materials to start the building. They are currently demolishing an old building in College Station for materials, but the semester ends in Wood predicted the house will be built next fall by the current students and members of next year's fourth year design class. The family also will apply for the FHA loan this summer. Wood said the wood frame home has 1,000 square feet with three bedrooms, one bath, a kitchen and living-dining area.

He estimated cost of new materials at $3,200. The home would cost between $8,000 to $10,000 if labor was included.

Currently, the students have cleared the site, installed piers and a septic system. Wood said the home can be built in three to four weeks. "There is no way we can't gain from this experience," he added. "We have already given the Brushey Community people hope. Now all we need to do is build the house."

HOW IT FIGURES:

Interesting statistics, right? Look at them one way, and you get 96. Look at them another way . . . long enough . . . and what you're likely to get is married. From that poin on, you multiply. So do you responsibilities.

It pays to plan for responsi bilities. You can do this now by investing in a life insuran program that can provide the foundation for a sound final cial structure. The earlier y start, the less it costs, and the more security you'll have chance to build.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS:

I have not sold Aggieland Flower & Gift Shoppe as has been rumored. It is true that I am in St. Joseph's Hospital with a broken hip, but my coworkers at the flower shop are very capable and are well able to take care of any flower or gift needs that you might have.

Thanks for your wonderful business you have favored us with. I expect to recover and am looking forward to being back in the shop to greet you soon.
