Antiwar Students shed hair, beards for better image

Graduating seniors must attend class

Undergraduate students expecting to graduate May 23 are required by Academic Council action to attend all classes next week, Academic Vice President Horace R. Byers said Wednesday.

Byers said that any unauthorized absence incurred during the week will be considered sufficient cause to withhold a student's degree at commencement exercises.

Regular distinguished student policy will be in effect during the week, Byers added.

Newell named visiting prof at Baylor Med

Dr. Paul H. Newell Jr., head of the Texas A&M University Biomedical Engineering Program, has been appointed visiting professor of Biomedical Engineering in the Department of Physiology at Baylor College of Medicine.

The announcement was made by Dr. Hebbel E. Hoff, associate dean of faculty and clinical affairs at the Houston institution.

50 expected here for class of '23 reunion

Approximately 50 members of the A&M class of 1923 will hold their 47th reunion on campus this weekend.

The group will headquarter at the Memorial Student Center.

Activities include a dinner Friday night, noon luncheon, campus tour and dinner Saturday and the reunion breakfast Sunday.

During the Saturday evening dinner, Dr. Sam H. Sanders of Memphis, Tenn., will receive a plaque from President A. R. Luedeker in recognition of the $25,000 President's Endowed

Campus Briefs

SCONA head named to state architecture society panel

Dave Mayfield, fifth-year architecture major and chairman of SCONA XVI, has been appointed a member of the Education Committee of the Texas Society of Architects' Commission on the Environment.

UNB to host FDT at barbeque tonight

The national champion Fish Drill Team will be guests of the University National Bank at a barbeque dinner tonight at 6:30 at Shilo Hall on Highway Six.

"We are proud of this fine group of young men, and are pleased to have them as our guests at a barbeque in their honor," said Bob Evans, bank vice president. "This Fish Drill Team has shown much dedication and brought national recognition to Texas A&M and Bryan-College Station. We are pleased to have our second annual barbeque in their honor."

Some American college students are getting haircuts and shaving off beards and mustaches in an attempt to improve their image while waging door-to-door antiwar campaigns.

More than 50 war protesters at San Jose (Calif.) State College had their beards shaved off and long hair trimmed to "standard" length Tuesday by four professional barbers who did it free.

"We thought turning skinhead would be the supreme sacrifice, but it's really working out," said Lou Solitske, a senior.

"The only way we are going to get this war stopped, he said, "is to get off campus and start mobilizing people . . . and we can do it better if we don't offend ordinary people with our appearance."

For the same reason, the student strike headquarters at Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H., now has a barber chair. Amateur barber Steven Shirey, Rochester, N.Y., mans the chair to cut the hair of students who fear the giness will make a bad first impression on New Hampshire citizens. Shirey was reported doing a brisk business.

And these moves toward a more conventional look are not limited to hair removal. Students at Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., donned shirts and ties in a college antiwar canvass. Last they put on sports jackets for canvass of the city and its suburbs.

Serving under Bartle will be Mike Holley, vice president for administration; Warren Faulkner, vice president for projects; and Eloy "Shrimp" Valdes, vice president for membership.

The chapter also presented Scott Wenvel with the best pledge award and Bartle with the best active award.
