

Senate tries for voice

Immediately following the defeat, Henderson moved that the senate executive committee be empowered to act as the voice of the student body in matters concerning the selection of a new president, and that the committee submit a list of qualities students want in the new president. The motion was approved, 43-5.

Kirby Brown, Issues chairman, proposed a resolution to be sent to the board saying that the senate felt it was a "grave injustice" that it so far has not been consulted on the matter. Mayes said that until the senate found out why the board had not contacted it, such a resolution might be premature. A subsequent vote defeated the proposal. Brown also was the senator who proposed that the senate pass a constitutional amendment giving University Women a seat on the senate. The corps and the civilians each have a special representative in the deputy corps commander and the Civilian Student Council second vice president, he said, so why shouldn't UW have a representative?

Some senators brought out the argument used the last three times a senate has considered the proposal this year, that if the women are given a seat, why not give one to all other minority groups?

Henderson asserted that UW is an organized "governing" body similar to the CSC and corps staff.

James O'Jibway, public relations chairman, argued that granting UW a seat would open the way for the Baptist Student Union, the Houston Hometown Club or anyone else to ask for an ex officio seat.

Henderson said that there was a difference between the groups O'Jibway mentioned and UW. UW represent a specific group, he said, like the CSC and corps staff do, and they are needed to supply input on women's views.

A roll call vote resulted in 35 yes, 21 no, 2 abstentions and 7 absent. The voting fell about 14 short of the three-fourths needed to pass the amendment.

Editor:

I partly agree with Michael Willett's letter to The Battalion—indeed the Kent State incident was a tragedy. Reviewing the facts, I have found that two of the dead students were girls and one was the "second ranking student in Kent State's Army ROTC unit" (from Time). Another ugly fact is that students were not told the guns were loaded! I also wonder about the distances that the two girls were throwing 'bricks, rocks and bottles'. Have you, however, had the opportunity to dodge a .30 caliber bullet? Would there have been a "tragedy" if there had been no bullets? Is the death penalty just punishment for those who throw rocks and should it be lighter for those who would shoot lead at those who throw rocks?

Editor:

As an A&M graduate, class of '59, I want to congratulate your student body president, as well as the whole student body of Texas A&M University for showing restraint and reason during the recent demonstrations throughout the U.S. Your student body president's comments during the recent Mother's Day program were most gratifying to me and I know to all other exes throughout the world. We all know there are many things that need to be changed in this country of ours, but there is a right and wrong way to change them. The students at Texas A&M are to be congratulated on the way they have handled themselves to date. We are all behind you.

Sincerely yours,
W. O. Kelly

A&M Club VP-PRs here for Saturday confab

Utilization of various public relations outlets available to A&M Club officials will be studied Saturday by club officers from across Texas.
