

A&M landfill has new loader

A new Allis-Chalmers 7-G track loader was placed at the university's sanitary landfill Wednesday, to replace three pieces of 30-year-old equipment. The new loader will perform all the requirements of burying refuse in the university landfill, including digging trenches, compacting refuse, covering it daily with at least a six-inch layer of soil and a minimum two-foot layer of soil over the final layer of refuse.

"We feel this loader will handle all of the solid wastes produced by the university," commented Daniel T. Whitt, Physical Plant assistant director of administration and operations.

He noted that the university began sanitary landfill operations six months before enactment of anti-pollution laws pertaining to garbage disposal by burning.

"We've been doing the best we could with three pieces of old equipment, a dragline and two bulldozers," Whitt said. He pointed out that in addition to their age, the machines were not designed for sanitary landfill work.

The new loader, delivered by Fogle Equipment Co. of Houston, was designed specifically for this purpose.

Whitt indicated the old equipment will not be retired until the loader is fully operational and personnel have been fully qualified to operate and maintain it.

The landfill located just east of Easterwood Field will receive only solid wastes from the main campus, Hensel and College View apartments.

Landfill loader delivered—Keys to a new sanitary landfill loader to be used at the university's facility south of the campus are delivered to Daniel T. Whitt of the Physical Plant Department by Bob Friely of Houston's Fogle Equipment Co. The machine will replace three pieces of equipment.

Health council invites faculty

Another step in health consciousness has been taken at Texas A&M University with formation of the Advisory Council for Faculty-Staff Recreation and Fitness.

Dr. John M. Chevrette, associate professor of health and physical education, said the purpose of the council is to work closely with the Health and Physical Education Department and other campus groups to provide recreational and fitness opportunities for faculty and staff members, graduate students and their families.

The council consists of faculty and staff members throughout the university.

Chevrette said that many A&M personnel are already taking advantage of the facilities every day. Activities include jogging, basketball, badminton, tennis, swimming, handball, weight training, cycling, sailing, and all-around physical conditioning for men and women.

Most of the faculty and staff members and wives do their physical fitness thing in or around G. Rollie White Coliseum during the noon hour. Chevrette said anyone interested in getting started on a program should go to the coliseum at that time.

participating in one of the five special sessions.

The five sessions on Tuesday afternoon have to do with physical environment and carry such titles as "Natural Resources — Who Needs Them?; Move Over! I Need Elbow Room; Who's Calling Your Plays?; Mind Over Matter and Environmental Pollution — A Reasonable View." Each special group will feature a program dealing with the problem or problems relating to their assigned segment of physical environment.

Wednesday's special sessions will delve into such problems as "Cost of Living High; Render Unto Caesar; Loving Care for Legal Tender; Fate of the Family Farm and Ill's Bills," all important aspects of economic environment.

Thursday's group sessions will take a look at social environment under such titles as "Do Your Own Think; Just Between Us; Cop Out or Commitment; ... And Baby Makes Three and What Leisure Time."

The Knapp-Porter Awards will be presented during the Thursday morning general session to two of the state's outstanding agricultural leaders.

Environment theme of confab

"Shaping Our Environment in the 1970's" is the theme for the August 10-14, biennial conference of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The conference and related activities will be held on the campus of Texas A&M University and all county, area and state staff members will be in attendance.

Extension Director John E. Hutehison said the conference program had been developed around three phases of environment; physical, economic and social. Outstanding authorities in their fields will be featured speakers at the morning general sessions, and during the afternoons, conferences will dig deeper into the different aspects of the environmental problems by
