

A second badge—Officer Bernie Frydman of the Long Beach, Cal. police department displays his badge alongside a small tie tac shaped like a pig. In police parlance, PIG stands for Pride-Integrity-Guts, and officers by the hundreds are wearing miniature pigs as uniform tie tacs. Frydman and his partner, Robert A. Fowks, originated the idea last March and have sold nearly 1,200 pig tie tacs all over the country. (AP Wirephoto)

Aggie Players set fall term tryouts

Tryouts for the Aggie Players Fall semester production of Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing" will be conducted Sept. 1 and 2.

The 7:30 p.m. tryouts in the Fallout Theater of Guion Hall will include readings of parts for four women and 17 men, noted C. K. Esten, Aggie Player director.

"Anybody who comes out will be guaranteed a place in the cast or crews," the English Department theater arts section director emphasized.

Rehearsals will start Thursday, Sept. 3, and the Shakespeare classic will be staged at Guion Hall Nov. 16-20. The Aggie Players production also will go on the road, for presentation Nov. 21 in the Schulenberg civic theater.

"Much Ado" will be the Texas A&M players' only production of the Fall semester and probably the last in Guion Hall. Removal of the 53-year-old structure to make way for the Memorial Student Center expansion and auditorium construction is expected to begin during the 1970-71 school year.

University slates industry program

Applications of remote sensing techniques to the petroleum industry will be explained during a one-day university-sponsored workshop Oct. 12 in Houston.

Dr. J. W. Rouse Jr., director of the Remote Sensing Center, reports five distinguished men knowledgeable in both remote sensing and petroleum exploration techniques will discuss specific examples of remote sensor data obtained for petroleum industry applications.

Remote sensing includes aerial photography, mechanical infrared scanning, radar and microwave radiometry.

The program is a pilot project by Texas A&M to determine the need for further expanding the university's remote sensing services to the petroleum industry.

Workshop speakers are F. F.

Sabins, Chevron Oil Field Research Co., La Habra, Calif.; E. Wermund, Remote Sensing, Houston; R. L. Kite, Esso Production Research Co., Houston; Donald W. Rockwell and Frederick Romberg, both of Geophysical Service, Inc., Dallas; and Dr. Rouse.

The workshop is scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Coastal Suite, Petroleum Club, Houston, 800 Bell Ave. Advance registration is required by Sept. 18 with attendance limited to 18.

Registration and other information is available from Sidney Sers, workshop coordinator, Remote Sensing Center, Texas A&M.

The Board of Directors established the Remote Sensing Center as a consortium of the College of Agriculture, Engineering, and Sciences and Science.

Clark given post as research dean

Dr. Donald L. Clark has been promoted to associate dean of research in the College of Education, Dean Frank W. R. Hubert announced.

Dr. Clark also will continue as associate professor of industrial education. The appointment is effective Sept. 1.

Dean Hubert said Dr. Clark will coordinate research and training activities in the college.

Dr. Clark, 38, joined the faculty in 1967, the year he received a Ph.D. in education from Ohio State.

He received a B.S. degree with distinction in industrial education from Stout State University, Menomonie, Wis., in 1961 and an M.S. in industrial education from Stout State in 1962.

Dr. Clark began his teaching career as a teaching assistant in the Electricity and Electronics Department at Stout State in 1962. From 1962 until 1965 he was a teacher of industrial arts and driver education and audiovisual building coordinator for the Janesville (Wis.) Public Schools.

While working toward his doctorate, he was a research and teaching associate at Ohio State.

Dr. Clark worked for a building supply company, paper mill and as a farm operator prior to entering teaching. He served in the Wisconsin National Guard from 1946 to 1955.

He is on the Membership Committee, American Council of Industrial Arts Teacher Education and has memberships in numerous local, state and national industrial arts associations, including Phi Delta Kappa, Epsilon Pi Tau and Iota Lambda Sigma.

Dr. Clark has authored several technical papers and given lectures.

He is an associate member of the graduate faculty at Texas A&M.

Campus calendar distributed

The 1970-71 all-university calendar went on faculty-staff distribution Friday at the Continuing Education Office in the Memorial Student Center.

The 20-by-25 inch light cardboard calendar lists major recurring events in student government, student organization, athletic and MSC Directorate areas through August, 1971.

Conferences, short courses and Town Hall, Rotary Community, Artist Showcase, TAMU special attractions and film series are also shown.

Revised dates of fall and spring semesters are detailed, with first semester finals slated Dec. 16-22. Fall semester commissioning and commencement are listed for Saturday, Dec. 12.

Continuing education coordinator F. W. Hensel said each department should place requests at the Continuing Education Office near the MSC main desk.

"All student calendar distribution will be handled through the Commandant's Office and the offices of the various civilian student counselors," Hensel added. "Day students may pick up the calendar in Lounge A-2, at the north end of Hughes Hall, starting August 24."

We'd like to twist your arm to convince you to switch to our cable company.

But we know that's an unacceptable way to sell CATV service. So we spend our time twisting bolts and dials to provide the best service possible.

It may not bring results as quick as high pressure salesmanship.

But in the end we believe good service is what most CATV customers really want.
