Elmendorf good either way

Coach Gene Stallings, in summer speeches, declared: "If we have a super-star on our squad it is Dave Elmendorf."

A professional scout, after watching two days of practice this fall, said: "If there ever was an All-America, it's Dave Elmendorf. I keep watching him and can't believe all the things he can do and do so exceedingly well. It's hard to believe he's really that good, but I know he is after watching him."

Elmendorf, 6-1 and 198, made All-Southwest Conference safety last year. He already had made All-SWC as a baseball outfielder and last spring he made the Academic All-America team in baseball. He has a career 3.76 grade point ratio out of a possible 4.0 in the tough field of economics.

The Aggies are just thankful that Elmendorf is around for his senior season in football. He turned down a very attractive offer from the Boston Red Sox this summer. "I felt I wouldn't be fair to myself if I didn't give football a chance. I like both sports. As to what will happen after this year, we'll just have to wait and see."

What's likely to happen is a bidding war between pro baseball and pro football.

"Elmendorf is a quality football player," Stallings says. "Everything he does has class. He'll provide the leadership we need for our younger players. I'm just glad he's back."

Stallings worked Elmendorf at offensive halfback all during two-a-day drills and then put him back at safety. On the basis of his sophomore years' showing at running back, he's likely to see some duty there this fall. Dave rushed for 129 yards on 17 carries against Florida State as a sophomore and scored two touchdowns.

He had a 6.1 running average that season as he jumped around from tailback to fullback to wingback to linebacker to safety. He spent all of his junior season at safety.

Chuck Hixson, the passing whiz who guides the SMU Mustangs, is one quarterback who'd like to see Elmendorf specialize on offense. "There are a lot of outstanding defensive backs in college football. Dave Elmendorf at A&M is one of them. He's the best I've ever seen."

Elmendorf, more than likely, will play all of the defense and see part-time duty in the offensive backfield during the 1970 season.

"Most players with his quickness are a lot smaller," the pro scout opined. "I can't remember when I've seen a player his size with such quick acceleration, muscular control, balance and coordination. And, on top of that, he's so aggressive. He looks like a linebacker on the safety blitz."

Elmendorf hasn't gotten a lot of nationwide ballyhoo in his bid for All-America honors. Around A&M it's felt that the youngster will earn that on the playing fields this fall.

He'll get good exposure, too, what with appearing at LSU, Ohio State and Michigan before tremendous crowds and large coverage by the news media.

Elmendorf is the type who'll rise to the occasion.

Things going Leonard's Way

Leonard Forey has a lot going for him.

For one thing, the Aggie junior is 6-3 and weighs 222 pounds, not bad size for an offensive guard. For another, the Nederland native was picked on the pre-season All-Southwest Conference team by Texas Football

Leonard Forey

Magazine. And last, but certainly not least, he has a new rooster.

Forey's wife Norma presented him with a 10-lb daughter, Lisa, who will be two weeks old when the Aggies open the 1970 season against Wichita State in Kyle Field Saturday.

That should be incentive enough to perform well, but Forey doesn't need the extra push. He was marked for excellence the moment he signed an A&M scholarship agreement, and he's lived up to expectations.

Forey was a mainstay on A&M's first undefeated freshman team in 1968. He stepped into a starter's role in his first spring training with the varsity and has been there ever since.

Texas A&M coach Gene Stallings calls Forey the finest blocker on the squad, and maybe the finest in the league. "Leonard has the ability to stay with a block for a long time. He can really move the defensive line around," Stallings says.

Forey will start at right guard when the Aggies take the field against Wichita. In tandem with right tackle Andy Phillely (84-240), the right side of the Aggie line should open up some holes for the backs.

Forey has excellent quickness for his size and should have a bright future in professional football ahead of him, if he elects to go that route. But first there are a lot of games to play for A&M, including some mighty tough ones this year.

Forey will get a good test of his ability against such teams as LSU, Ohio State and Michigan, which A&M plays on the road in a three-week stretch beginning Sept. 19.

With a tough Southwest Conference schedule following that, including national powers Arkansas and Texas, Forey and his teammates have a rough row ahead.

But with Forey going for the Aggies, and the things going for Forey, the competition had better beware.

Oilers cut seven

HOUSTON (AP) — Only three rookies were among seven players cut Wednesday as the Houston Oilers reduced their squad to 44 players.

One of the rookies, Julian Fagan, a punter from Mississippi, was claimed on waivers by the New Orleans Saints.

Others cut were Mike Barnard, third year safety from Texas Arlington; Rich Johnson, second year running back from Illinois; Jim Lemoine, fourth year guard from Utah State; Charles Olsen, rookie safety from Concordia, Minnesota; Carel Stith, third year defensive tackle from Nebraska; and Ed Watson, second year line backer from Grambling.
