Editor: Every year the Texas A&M Club of Baton Rouge hosts a Hospitality Room prior to the A&M-LSU football game.

I am a civilian student and really don't mind that fish no longer whip out, for I realize many civilian students have given corps fish a hard time whenever they do whip out.

Editor: This letter is regarding Miss Bath's recent comment concerning the 1970 AggieLand. Although we agree the picture (on page 3) was in poor taste, we also feel it is unfair to accuse the student body of being immature.

For years, A&M has been known as the "friendliest college campus in the world," so let's keep it that way.

Say "hello" to the people you meet.

Lombardi research centers proposed

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. John M. Murphy, D-N.Y., proposed Wednesday that no less than $1 billion be appropriated over the next 10 fiscal years for a Vincent Thomas Lombardi cancer research program.

Saturday night's victory was the best way possible to start a football season. We are proud of the team, and commend the members and coach Gene Stallings for the fine game they played.

It is truly unfortunate the Aggies did, in a sense, lose that night.

The incidents were fairly minor, but significant enough to warrant comment.

Some students watching the game seemed to think it was necessary to make frequent references to the masculinity of the officials or of the opposing team's members. Obscene language and corps slang also seemed to find their way into the yelling of some people.

All this even with women present. What a way to present a good image of A&M and its students, one of a gentlemanly student body, courteous and respectful to others.

We do not for one minute mean to keep anyone from having a good time, or to condemn school pride and spirit, but we do feel it can be shown without resort to the language used.

During the half, when the senior line formed, we were treated to an example of the backward thinking of some individuals on campus. At least one coed was seen running out to form the line, and one Ag was heard to mutter something to the effect that she should stay in the stands where she belonged, and stay out of the line.

He, like many others, just doesn't realize women now are part of A&M too, and are just as much Aggies as anyone. They, too, enjoy and wish to participate in our traditions. It is a fact some might try and accept.

Maybe the next home game will be different, as far as crowd behavior goes; we hope so.

For now, let's beat the hell out of LSU.
