$331,000 research project given A&M

NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center has awarded A&M a $331,000 grant for Phase II research in design of a space shuttle craft for flights between earth and orbital laboratories, announced Acting President A. R. Lueddecke.

Lueddecke said a major portion of the funds will be used to develop and test a flexible model of the proposed shuttle craft.

A&M designed, built and tested a rigid model during Phase I research.

Lueddecke said that, prior to actual development of the flexible model, the university will conduct studies in the theoretical area to confirm computer programs for the advanced model.

In the early stages, A&M will be working with NASA's Ames Research Center and The Boeing Co., which jointly developed the computer program.

Later studies will center around stability and control work and testing of the model in the university's wind tunnel.

Development of a space shuttle craft is an integral part of the space agency's plans for orbiting laboratories to conduct earth-oriented studies, explained Harry Whitmore, director of A&M's Space Technology Division.

A major consideration in such an operation is the problem of getting men and supplies to and from the satellite, Whitmore said.

"The vehicle to do such a job must be a combination of a space-craft and airplane," he continued, "with such a craft having the capability to go to the manned platform, return to earth and land at an airfield rather than splash down in the water."

The A&M program is an interdisciplinary effort jointly conducted by the university's Aerospace, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering Departments and the Computer Science Division of the Industrial Engineering Department. Co-principal investigators are Dr. R. E. Martin and Dr. Ralph Cavin.

PEK officers are installed

The Gamma Beta Chapter of the Phi Epsilon Kappa, the honorary physical education fraternity, installed officers and discussed upcoming projects in its first meeting of the 1970-71 school year.

Officers include: David Reams, president; Tom Semper, vice-president; Rick Cauble, secretary; John Dias, treasurer; Jim Terry, guide; Joey Barton, sergeant-at-arms; and Lee Condrey, historian-editor. Earl Yarborough and Don Scherrer were appointed to head the programs committee.

Projects under consideration for the coming year include a Thanksgiving turkey trot, pledge projects, and an introductory meeting for junior and senior physical education majors wishing to join the fraternity.

Law students invited to Baylor pre-law day

A&M students interested in law school have been invited to Baylor University's annual Pre-Law Day Program Saturday, Sept. 26.

Dr. J. M. Nance, A&M History Department head, is coordinating the program and should be contacted as soon as possible.

The dean of the Baylor School of Law is a former Aggie, Angus S. McSwain, a 1944 civil engineering graduate.

The program begins at 8 a.m. and includes a panel discussion on pre-law studies, entrance requirements, law school curriculum, scholarships and financial aid, placement and a tour of facilities.

Participants also receive a meal and are invited to attend the Baylor-Pittsburgh football game as guests of Baylor.

"Students interested in preparing to study law will find this an excellent opportunity to learn about one of the major schools in Texas," Dr. Nance noted.

Film Festival opens Friday

The first of a series of international films—"Rocco and His Brothers"—will be screened Friday at A&M through the Fall Film Festival.

Winner of 22 international awards, "Rocco" portrays explosive problems created by a rural family trying to adjust to life in an industrial city.

The Film Festival opener starts at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Student Center ballroom.

The series is part of the MSC's

Twenty-seven A&M faculty members have been selected to have biographical histories in the 1970 edition of "Outstanding Educators of America."

Nominations are made by the presidents and deans of colleges and school districts. Guidelines include an educator's talents in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities and any civic and professional

Nixon's Kansas State talk receives national praise

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—Scores of congratulatory messages on student conduct during President Nixon's speech at Kansas State University have been received by campus officials.

University President James McCain said the messages came from all over the country after Nixon's address was televised nationally Wednesday.

"Today our cup runneth over," Dr. McCain then quoted from some of the messages: "I temporarily lost faith in the youth of America, but after today my faith has been completely restored," said a woman from Tennessee.

"What a tremendous show of first-class Americanism," a man in Minnesota said.

"We're proud of K-State today," said a Deerfield, Ill., couple.

Former Gov. Alf Landon, 83, the 1936 Republican presidential nominee for whom the lecture series is named, said a small band of hecklers, a group estimated at from 30 to 50 pupils in the upper reaches of the balcony, didn't bother Nixon a bit.

Gov. Robert Docking, a Democrat, said, "I am proud of the majority of students at Kansas State University who demonstrated their respect for Mr. Nixon and the office of the President."

Pat Bosco, Kansas State student body president, said the visit affirmed his view that students want to listen to Nixon. "He's got to get out to the students."

Bosco said the President's speech had an "optimistic tone, but if it isn't a start for Nixon's getting out to other colleges, then it is just another speech."

Nixon was greeted by prolonged applause before, during and after his speech before the audience of some 15,500 jammed into the field house.

Wearing a purple striped tie, the colors of Kansas State, President Nixon won resounding

ROTC steady despite critics

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon said today attacks by campus militants and antiwar critics have had little effect on the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) program and it will continue to be used as the primary source of officers for the military.

"The dissident activity on campus directed toward ROTC has not had the effect of interfering with the objectives of ROTC," declared Roger T. Kelley, assistant secretary of defense for manpower affairs.

Kelley said a year-long study of the ROTC program indicated that the vast majority of college students favors its retention on campus.

Kelley said the ROTC program turned out 23,000 officers in last June's graduating classes from some 347 campuses. However, he noted that ROTC is on 24 fewer campuses this year than in 1966.

cheers from the students who he said he wore it over the objections of a television producer who said "purple doesn't go with blue suit."

"All I can say," the President said with a broad smile, "is that I am proud to wear the purple of Kansas State."

There were exceptions to the favorable comments. One student was quoted as saying, "It was unfortunate that he (Nixon) got away without any more trouble than he did. I want to apologize to the rest of the students across the country."

Applause and cheering for the President smothered each effort by the small group of hecklers to interrupt him.

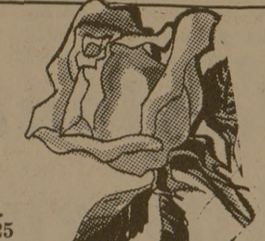

Henry Reuter, a sophomore from Manhattan, said of the dissenters: "I am sorry they were here. They certainly don't reflect the attitude of the university as a whole."

Another student, Kathleen Salamin, said "He really put down the people who don't respect authority. They are a definite minority."
