

U.S. forces stand ready to evacuate Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States marshaled land, sea and air forces Monday for possible use in Jordan, but officials insisted that evacuation of Americans is the only assignment being considered now. And even that didn't seem imminent.

The Pentagon said infantry and paratroop units at home and in Europe were placed on alert, and extra C130 transports were positioned overnight in Europe to airlift these troops wherever and whenever needed.

Some U.S. medical units in Europe also were alerted, and a third Navy aircraft carrier, the John F. Kennedy, was en route to join the two carriers already in the Mediterranean.

Pentagon officials said the alerts were for specific units, not for all services, and do not involve moving any Army troops.

There are about 400 Americans in Jordan, mostly in Amman, and 18 of the 54 hijacked airline hostages still held by Palestinian guerrillas are Americans.

At the State Department, press officer Robert J. McCloskey said the United States has spoken publicly of possible intervention to bring American citizens out of Jordan, and said there has been some tentative discussion with the Jordanian government about airports that might be used.

But he said there has been no recommendation from the U.S. embassy in Amman for evacuation of Americans. This apparently means that U.S. embassy officials feel there is no immediate danger.

McCloskey said that if U.S. military forces are sent in to remove American citizens from Jordan it is hoped that the evacuation will be peaceful.

McCloskey said the United States has decided to send two military field hospitals to Jordan and is discussing arrangements with the International Red Cross for getting them into the war-torn country.

He said Jordan has appealed for the field hospitals.

Officials said they probably would be manned by American military personnel — principally doctors and nurses — because only people trained in their use know how to set them up.

Six new members join Architecture

Six new faculty members have been announced by the College of Architecture and Environmental Design.

Dean Edward J. Romieniec said the new men include Fred Klatt Jr. and David G. Woodcock, associate professors; Dr. Robert L. Bradley, A. C. Hamblett and E. Dudley Watkins, assistant professors; and Robert O. Segner, instructor.

Bradley and Segner will teach in the Building Construction Department. Bradley earned his undergraduate degree at Trinity University in 1966 and master's and Ph.D. at A&M. Segner received his undergraduate degree from A&M last year and is now studying for a master's degree.

Klatt, who will teach in the Landscape Architecture Department, earned his undergraduate and master's degrees from A&M.

Hamblett, who joins the Environmental Design Department, earned his undergraduate degree at Texas Tech University and master's at the University of Virginia.

Watkins and Woodcock will direct the graduate programs in building design and urban design, respectively, for the Architecture Department. Watkins is a graduate of Oklahoma State University. Woodcock, from Manchester, England, spent a year at A&M in 1962 on a Fulbright Professorship.

Saving receives Ford fellowship

Dr. Thomas R. Saving of the A&M economics faculty has been awarded a Ford Foundation faculty research fellowship.

The award, which pays Dr. Saving's academic salary for a year, is one of 20 annually given nationwide to faculty personnel in the social sciences by the Ford Foundation.

While Saving is on leave from the classroom, Dr. Michael DePrano, visiting professor from the University of Southern California, will assume the Ford Foundation research fellow's teaching duties, according to Dr. John W. Allen.

"Competition is quite keen for the Ford Foundation faculty research fellowships," stated Allen, head of the Economics Department which recently received a $458,000 National Science Foundation departmental science development grant.

"It is a distinct honor for Dr. Saving, the department and A&M," Allen said.

A former Michigan State University economics professor, Dr. Saving came to A&M in 1968. The 1957 Michigan State graduate who earned the master's and doctorate at the University of Chicago specializes in mathematical economics, macroeconomic and monetary theory.

Saving also taught at the University of Washington and has been a professional consultant to the attorney general of California, Consumers Power Company and the Federal Trade Commission, among others.

His publications include numerous journal articles and two books published by Macmillan.

Dr. Flowers selected committee chairman

Dr. A. I. Flowers has been selected by the Brazos Valley Development Council's Executive Committee to be chairman of the BVDC Health Planning Committee.

Dr. Flowers, head of the Veterinary Public Health Department, succeeds County Judge William Vance.

Griffiths elected air control head

Prof. John F. Griffiths of A&M has been elected chairman of the Southwestern section of the Air Pollution Control Association.

The organization meets once a month in Houston to discuss problems of abatement of air contaminants through education. Fundamental and practical knowledge applications are brought out. Griffiths, faculty member of the Meteorology Department, said persons interested in learning more about the association should contact him.

The associate professor has been an A&M faculty member eight years. He has directed study of Houston's air pollutants and their distribution under Public Health Service grant for the last three years.
