From other campuses

By James R. Jackson

Hippies and cops will battle it out at TU next Sunday in a game of baseball. The game originated when students challenged campus police to a slow-pitch softball contest. Commenting on the game, Assistant Police Chief Bill Purse said, "It should be a lot of fun, something to laugh about."

"The draft faces two principle sources—ignorance of young men not properly informed of their rights in the Selective Service laws and complacency of those accepting conscription as an unchallengeable power," Jim Liggett, UH draft counselor, said. He thinks the draft has almost no chance of becoming illegal, "but it can become inoperable."

He adds, "If all men would appeal their 1-A (draftable) classifications and if the requests for deferments became great, the Selective Service System would bog down—it is not impossible to fight the draft."

Julian Bond, speaking at TU, told students that an expected alliance between white college students and blacks had failed because students were more interested in music, drugs and the "ennobling sacrifice of self-enforced poverty," than in black problems. Bond, a founder of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee and the first black member of the Georgia House of Representatives, said there had been a revolution in blacks' thinking about themselves.

"The presence of ROTC on campus is not nearly so earth-shaking as rats in the ghetto," Bond said.

At Rice, the SDS are burning their ID cards, to "protest U.S. occupation of Kansas."

At Sam Houston State, two "cowboys" and two "hippies" are leading a sort of peaceful co-existence. The four representatives of each stereotype have gotten an apartment together and are diligently tolerating each other. Questioned, one of the hippies commented, "We do have our problems, but we have an understanding—we go our way, the 'kickers' their's."

A "bra test" may not get included in the Palm Beach County school system if an attorney has his way. Sylvan Burdick, the attorney, claims the "bra test" is an invasion of individual privacy. Burdick maintains that girls suspected of not wearing appropriate undergarments are summoned before the school's dean for the test.

The dean asks the girl to jump up and down, and if there is too much "bounce," the girl is sent home to get a bra.

Mark Gerzon, author of "The Whole World is Watching," said in a speech at UH, "The primary purpose of a university is to revolutionize people."

Gerzon, a 21-year-old graduate of Harvard, said that by the time students are university age, they are reaching the "revolutionary creativity" stage. This, he said, is the cause of the radical movement around the world today. He said every radical action today is trying to make youths question acts. Gerzon sees this as healthy and cited the rise of the Nazis as a result of the 1930 German students' reluctance to question.

Gerzon gathered most of his knowledge of youth by hitchhiking around the country. Before arriving in Houston, he traveled through Texas, stopping in Dallas and College Station, to gain "a feeling for the South."
