All-University night begins full weekend

All-University Weekend starts Thursday at Texas A&M with a variety of activities culminating in the A&M-Texas Tech football game Saturday at Kyle Field.

Gov. Preston Smith, his wife, and other members of his family will be among a near-capacity crowd for the Aggies' SWC opener.

Sharing the All-University spotlight will be a Thursday yell practice, Town Hall featuring balladeer Glenn Yarbrough, a dance at the Grove and introduction of Aggie Sweetheart Sue Binford.

Also on the weekend agenda are an A&M-Tech soccer match, Career Day in the Colleges of Agriculture and Engineering, a Cadet Corps march-in to the game and Basement coffee house entertainment by Keith Sykes.

Head yell leader Keith Chapman of Haskell said the All-University Night yell practice will be at 8:30 p.m. Thursday in G. R. White Coliseum. It will follow the format of previous All-University Nights.

Comments by Student Senate President Kent Caperton of Caldwell and Chapman will be followed by remarks from Acting President A. R. Luedecke. Head Coach Gene Stallings will be induced and in turn will present team members.

The Basement opens at 8 p.m. Thursday for the first of four shows by national coffee house circuit performer Keith Sykes. He will be in the spotlight again Friday from 8 to midnight, for a Saturday 2 to 5 p.m. matinee and postgame show from 10 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Also on tap Friday is the 8 p.m. Town Hall in G. Rollie White. After the Glenn Yarbrough show, Alpha Phi Omega is sponsoring an admission-free dance in the Grove. Campus Chest collections will be made at the event.

Miss Binford, Texas Woman's University student of Tucson, Ariz., will be introduced at half-time of the 7:30 p.m. Saturday game. A&M and Tech also meet on the main drill field for a 2 p.m. soccer game.

Kyle Field activities begin soon after 6 p.m. when a Ross Volunteer honor guard escorts Smith, Air Force Brig. Gen. James U. Cross, Luedecke and other dignitaries to the stadium for a 6:20 p.m. Corps of Cadets march-in. The governor will be reviewing dignitary and Cross, 75th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing at Bergstrom AFB, will take salutes.

Agriculture and Engineering College displays will be exhibited from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in White Coliseum in conjunction with career day.

Legett Hall holds Wreck Tech bash

For 10 cents a swing, or the bargain price of three for a quarter, you can vent your feelings for Texas Tech by sledge-hammering an old car body.

The residents of Legett Hall set a car body outside their dorm and are conducting a "Wreck Tech" car bash today and Friday between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Proceeds from the 2-day car bash will go to Legett Hall projects.

"A student, faculty-staff member or anyone else can let out his tensions and anxieties this way. The student can pretend it's his prof, or simply consider it good exercise, for which no extra charge will be made," Hall President Bill Shaw of Ft. Worth said.

CSC discusses hall conditions

By BILL O'CONNOR
Battalion Staff Writer

Residence hall living conditions, the Aggieldand's desire for civilian staff members and the 1970 Bonfire were discussed at the Civilian Student Council meeting Wednesday night.

Terry Van Dyck, Law Hall president, asked for a report about what improvements have been made on residence halls in past years and what improvements are planned for the future.

Mark Olson, CSC president, said corps dorms underwent major renovations during the fall of 1967, including construction of dividers next to sinks, a lighting change and a change in the style of desks in the rooms. During the summer of 1969, civilian halls of the Davis-Gary and Moses type were renovated and repainted, Olson said.

Howard Perry, civilian student activities director, said there are plans for the elimination of certain halls, but said he could not specifically state which halls or when the plans would be executed.

Perry later said much depended on how filled halls would be in the future, and how much new construction would be completed.

A resolution calling attention to the fact that several halls on campus were substandard, including Law, Puryear, Milner, Mitchell, Hotard and Legett, was passed by the CSC. The resolution calls for the appointment of a special committee to research the situation and make recommendations for improvements to the appropriate authorities.

Olson then checked his watch before beginning a discussion of the Aggieldand. Olson had earlier told the council that past meetings had been too long and this one should take only one hour.

"The Aggieldand is willing to work with us (civilians) in any way," Olson said. Olson explained that the primarily corps-staffed Aggieldand is willing to incorporate civilians into its staff. Applications to become a member of the staff must be in to The Aggieldand by Oct. 15, Olson said.

Joe Arredondo, Hart Hall president and Aggieldand civilian editor said applications may be obtained from hall presidents or at the Student Program Office in the MSC.

Olson told hall presidents to find people who really wanted to work and make a good civilian section. "Get people that will work," Olson told them. "You'd better go out and beat the bush to find these people."

A discussion on the 1970 bonfire followed.

"We need semis, flatbeds, chain saws, axes, dozers, tractors, cranes and cherry-pickers," Olson said. He said anyone having

BAC will try to confirm dialogue in Review story

BY FRAN HAUGEN
Battalion Managing Editor

The Black Awareness Committee (BAC) will attempt to verify information in "Black Students Rap," a dialogue of 15 black students slated to appear in this year's first issue of "The Review," the magazine of the College of Liberal Arts, until Liberal Arts Dean W. David Maxwell told Editor Janie Wallace Monday the story could not be run because some of the facts are unsubstantiated.

Sidney Chacere, in charge of public relations for the BAC, said the committee will try to verify the facts. He said the ones not verified will be taken out of the story and the story will be reorganized.

The story will then be submitted to Maxwell or the Student Publications Board, Chacere said.

Chacere said the committee will check on a statement attributed to Dr. Kenneth Goode, University of California at Berkeley, made at a Memorial Student Center presentation last year, on expenses at Prairie View A&M; on a statement attributed to A&M Athletic Director Gene Stallings, statements about southern heritage attributed to history professors and statements made by cadets in C-1, saying the outfit didn't "cater to blacks."

Four or five members of the BAC will attend the regional National Association of Black Students (NABS) conference in Austin Oct. 22-24, Vice President Ray Jones said.

Gwen Woods, national coordinator of NABS, and James Foreman, author of "Black Manifesto," will be speakers at the conference.

James Bradley said that little work had been done on a display of black art and life styles "to get the attention of both sides of the campus—the blacks and the whites."

He said he would set up a meeting the first of next week to begin work on it and anyone with ideas could work on the exhibit. The Contemporary Arts Committee may help with the project, he said.

The BAC will also have a representative on the Senate's University Police subcommittee, Jones said.

The members were encouraged to attend the Great Issues Soapbox Forum Tuesday.

Jones urged the members to see the Supremes Oct. 16.

"We gripped about there being no black entertainers here," he said. "Now there are."

Why should you go if you don't like rock music, a member asked.

Eighteen black students and six white students were present at the meeting.

Wichita sent plaque by A&M

The Texas A&M student body has extended its sympathy to the students at Wichita State University for the recent deaths of members of its football team and coaching staff in a plane crash.

Kent Caperton, Student Senate president, said a memorial plaque has been sent to the Wichita State Student Government Association, along with a personal letter from himself.

The plaque reads: "The students at Texas A&M dedicate this plaque to those players, coaches and friends of Wichita State University who lost their lives in the tragic plane crash on Oct. 2, 1970."

Game forecast: warm and dry

Dry weather has been forecast for Saturday night at Kyle Field, when the Texas Aggies open Southwest Conference football with a game against Texas Tech.

"The weather picture is not too bright for any cool weather this week or for the game," commented Jim Lightfoot, Meteorology Department weather station manager.

He said Saturday and Sunday low temperatures will be near 70 degrees with the daytime high about 86.

For the 7:30 p.m. A&M-Tech kickoff, he said the forecast is for partly cloudy skies, southeast wind 10 to 15 mph, 81 degrees and 75 per cent relative humidity, with the humidity higher during the evening.

Fish Drill Team to march in Tyler

Texas A&M's 1970-71 Freshman Drill Team will march as the featured unit Oct. 24 in the annual Tyler Rose Festival and Parade.

The team commanded by Cleo D. Moore of Houston also will appear in an exhibition drill in Rose Stadium before an expected crowd of 15,000, announced J. Malon Southerland, team advisor.

Appearance at the "City of Roses" festival will be the earliest performance ever by a Fish Drill Team, the A&M Commandant's Office sponsor added.

A December competition is usually the team's only performance during the fall semester, with the regular drill season coming during the spring.

The team that will defend three straight national drill championships next April in Washington received special invitation from the Rose Festival committee and Tyler Chamber of Commerce president.

The Fish Drill Team will be hosted by the Tyler-Smith County A&M Club, chaired by 1956 A&M graduate Delma House. Bus transportation will be provided to get the 35-member team, upperclass advisors and sponsors to Tyler.

In order to prevent the freshmen from missing the A&M-Baylor football game, the team will be taken from Tyler to Waco after performing. They will be bused to College Station after the SWC game.

Senior advisor of the Freshman Drill Team is Richard A. Hanes of San Antonio. Sponsors accompanying 46 students on the trip are Southerland, Army Capt. Charles H. Briscoe and Air Force Maj. Harvey J. Haas.
