COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio National Guard, criticized by a presidential commission in connection with the shooting deaths of four Kent State University students, has asked for non-lethal weapons for use in future disorders. But the Guard plans to continue to carry rifles and load them on command.

Ohio Adj. Gen. Sylvester T. Del Corso, commander of the Ohio Guard, said Tuesday Guardsmen will continue the policy "to have ammunition with them when called out and will load their weapons on command of an officer."

"We do not want to kill anyone or even injure anyone. But the trouble is there when we are called out, and we have to be prepared to do our job."

Del Corso has noted he is under court order not to comment on the shooting deaths last spring of four students and wounding of nine others at Kent State pending conclusion of a state grand jury investigation of that incident.

Because of that, he said he would not comment on a report released this week by the President's Commission on Campus Unrest. The report condemned the violent actions of some students at Kent State, terming them intolerable. It also criticized the Ohio Guard for using loaded weapons on the campus and denounced the shootings as "unnecessary, unwarranted and inexcusable."

Career Day set for Saturday

A&M's annual Agricultural and Engineering Career Day set October 10 is expected to draw a large turnout of Texas high school students, teachers, parents, and the public. Last year's attendance was 3,800.

Committee chairmen Agricultural Associate Dean R. C. Potts and Engineering Assistant Dean J. G. McGuire have reported response to invitations indicate twice this number may attend the exhibition concerning careers and study programs in agriculture and engineering from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in DeWare Field House.

Faculty and student representatives will be available to talk with the students, answer questions, and distribute printed materials about careers within each discipline. Twenty-seven exhibits are planned. The Cooperative Education program, in which students alternate periods of university attendance and employment in industry, will be explained, McGuire said.

Ranger company for extra training

By JOHN CURYLO

"Our purpose in the A&M Ranger Company is to make available extra military training for those cadets desiring it."

That is the goal set by Roger W. Waak, this year's commanding officer of the company. Waak, a history major from Wichita Falls, said that the unit was formed in the fall of 1968 by Sherman Roberts, who had just returned from Army ROTC summer camp.

Roberts felt that such a company would better prepare cadets for summer camp. He also intended to provide training for those who were interested in Ranger school once they were in the Army.

The company uses classroom sessions and practical warfares (p.w.'s) to teach the basics of Ranger training and skills, according to Willie Cisneros, the executive officer of the A&M Rangers.

"We try to apply in the field what we teach in class," Cisneros said. "The first semester is geared toward preparation for summer camp, while the second semester is devoted to Ranger tactics."

The 55 members of the company meet once a week for their classroom sessions. Emphasis is placed on different parts of the training cadets learn in military science class. Practical and conventional skills, such as writing operation orders, are taught.

The advisor for the Rangers is Capt. Charles Briscoe of A&M's Military Science Department. Capt. Briscoe, a 1965 graduate of The Citadel, acts as a liaison between the cadets and the Military Science Department in coordinating the activities of the company. The cadet leaders actually run the company, however, Capt. Briscoe works with plans and advisory duties.

The high point of last year's p.w.'s was a 24-hour problem encountered by the company in April. This p.w. encompassed all the basic skills of Ranger tactics. The cadets went from the Bryan airfield 23 miles down the Brazos River in rubber rafts, and then they held a 7-mile forced march.

The Ranger Company has been involved in two activities already this year, in addition to the weekly classroom sessions, announced Tim Leftwich, the public information officer for the A&M Rangers.

The weekend of Sept. 26-27, 52 members of the company went to Ft. Hood to observe and take part in various aspects of airborne training. Each A&M Ranger took a practice jump from the 34-foot tower used by the Texas National Guard airborne unit.

The cadets drove to Waco for classes of instruction there at the National Guard Armory. They were taught how to jump and what equipment they could carry when jumping. The company then watched the actual training of an airborne unit.

Egypt's National Assembly nominated Acting President Anwar Sadat for a full six-year term as president Wednesday and pledged the new leadership would follow the policies of Gamal Abdel Nasser.

However, there were indications in Cairo and elsewhere that Nasser's successors were taking a tougher line toward the United States and Israel than the late Egyptian president took.

In Beirut, newspapers of both the right and the left noted a tougher Egyptian stance.

"Egypt Stifens After Nasser," declared the banner headline in the right-wing Lebanese newspaper Al Nahar. The independent right-wing newspaper Al Hayat noted the "beginning of a crisis between the United States and Egypt after Nasser."

Al Kifah, which reflects the views of the anti-Nasser Iraqi government, said support for a Middle East settlement appears to be receding in Egypt.

Sadat and Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad have rejected an American demand for withdrawal of anti-aircraft missiles from the Suez Canal cease-fire zone, and the country's only political party, the Arab Socialist Union, called the United States and Israel the "main enemies."

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahrar said Sadat told U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Elliot L. Richardson that Egypt rejects all claims of missile movements in the truce zone in violation of the agreement. It quoted the Egyptian leader: "The first and foremost thing is that nobody asks us to withdraw a single missile from the front because that is completely unacceptable."

At the United Nations in New York, a British spokesman expressed concern over the U.S. decision to pull out of deputy level talks to establish guidelines for a Middle East peace. The talks among the United States, Britain, France and the Soviet Union should continue "and be seen to do so," a British spokesman said.

The U.S. representative, Christopher H. Phillips, said Tuesday it is pointless to continue the talks until Egypt agrees to pull back from the Suez Canal the missiles it allegedly placed there during the cease-fire.

Travelers from Cairo reported in Beirut on Wednesday they had seen brisk military activity on the Egyptian side of the Suez Canal.

"The Egyptian desert between Cairo and Suez is blooming with radar installations, bunkers and missile sites," one traveler said. Another reported seeing tanks entering the cease-fire area carrying workmen, cement and prefabricated concrete building beams.
