Manners needed here, Ag says

"I've never seen a guy get so much mileage out of a three-point field goal!"

Editor:
I purchased membership in the Computer Services Corporation this past summer. I can't remember when I've been stung so badly, I'm sure that other CSC cardholders are in the same boat.

The "boat" is simply this. Those who purchased memberships during the pre-advertising campaign paid $28.50. Now the price is $49.50 and for what I don't yet know. When I purchased membership, I was to receive a new catalog free this fall with a list of all participating businesses in Bryan and College Station. I never heard from CSC after the initial card packet had been sent, which did not include the new list and catalog. After contacting CSC, I found that the new catalogs will now be available at cost; two dollars—four times per year. I am perturbed to say the least.

If enough perturbed CSC cardholders voiced their opinions to Dean Hannigan, The Bryan Better Business Bureau, The Battalion, and, oh yes, CSC, I am sure something can be done. (Writing letters to these people and organizations was suggested to me by Dean Stafford.) I would like to hear from other perturbed CSC cardholders and urge those considering membership to think twice before wasting their money.

Let us examine Mark Olsen's argument in defense of the Bonfire when faced by concerned environmentalists. The first argument, and obviously the most telling, is that the owner of Texas International Speedway plans to bulldoze the trees into a parking lot, so why don't the Ags take advantage of this and use the doomed trees for the Bonfire.

This argument ignores the fact that bulldozers cost money, whereas freshmen don't. It is possible, not probable, that the owner of Texas International Speedway had no intention of cutting those trees unless he could get it done for free by unknowing Aggies. We don't know this to be true, but it is something to think about.

Another argument of Olsen's is that Ags do a lot for the environment once they get out of school. In reply to this it should be considered that if we continue to sacrifice our natural beauty and environmental balance for the sake of tradition (or masculinity, whichever fits) then it is possible that by the time we get out of A&M there may not be an environment to save.

Let us pray to God that there will always be enough trees to provide Aggies an opportunity to prove that they are men.

Editor:
It is my sincere hope there will be a large turnout for this year's Man Your Manners forum, because it came as a shock, this past weekend, to see Aggies being selfish and extremely inconsiderate.

Sunday afternoon behind the MSC several women from TWU had assembled suitcases and clothing-bags in preparation for their return trip to Denton. Most of the Tessie were with their dates; however, the girl doing the driving was unescorted.

I came upon this group with another member of the Tessie party to find four "knightly gentlemen" getting in one last good-bye while the driver was making difficult progress loading her car. I proceeded to load the car for her—still none of the others made an effort to assist. In fact, when I had finished, the four were still hanging all over their dates.

If the men guilty of this rudeness have enough sense to realize of whom I write, I hope they are proud—they made me sick.
