Library sets all-night hours for three days

The Texas A&M Library will remain open all night three nights during the final examination period, Director John B. Smith announced.

He said the Dec. 15-17 schedule has been arranged on an experimental basis to benefit students who wish a quiet place in which to study for extended periods.

"The 24-hour schedule is planned as an experiment to assist students preparing for their exams," Smith said. He indicated minimal library staff will be on duty between midnight and 8 a.m., so normal service will cease at the usual times.

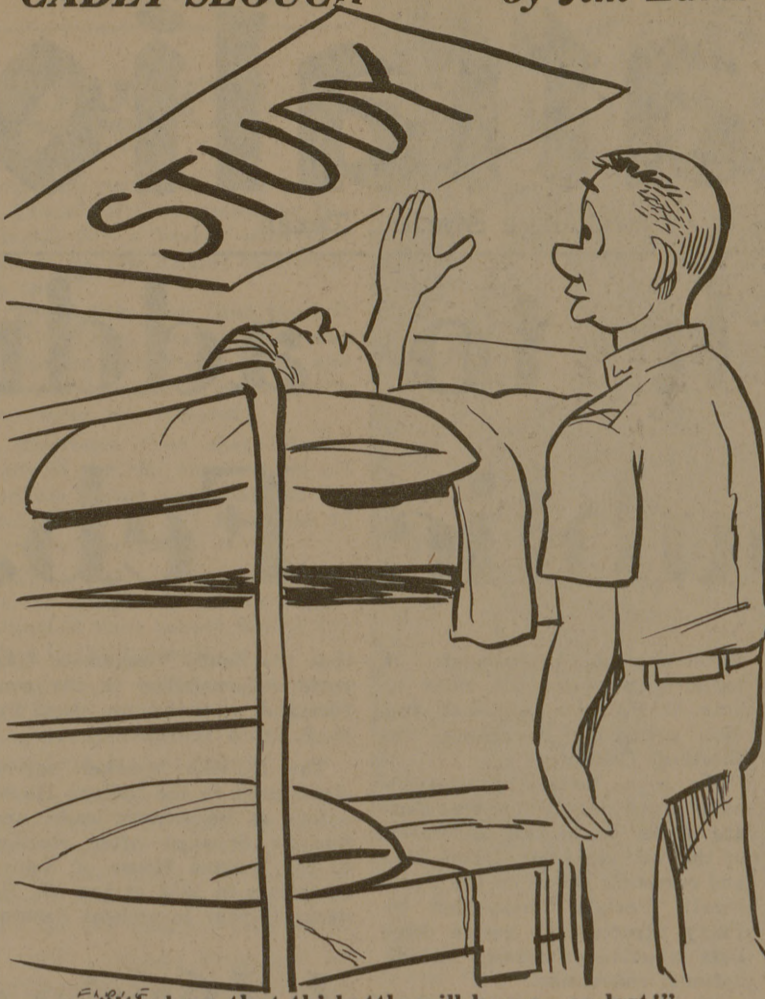

Usual library rules concerning smoking and eating in assigned areas will apply at all times, he said.

Woolket elected to Masonic post
