High level of pesticides found in Gulf barracuda

A high level of pesticides has been discovered by Texas A&M University oceanographers in a fish captured more than 100 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico.

Dr. Thomas J. Bright, chief scientist for the cruise during which the fish was caught, said the significance of the discovery is two-fold: that pesticides have penetrated so far offshore and the high level of concentration.

The fish, a barracuda measuring three and one-half feet in length, was caught during some general investigations at the Flower Garden Banks 130 miles south-southeast of Galveston.

The Flower Garden Banks are the northernmost living coral reefs in the gulf. The Sea Grant Program is considering a study which might lead to dedication of the unique reefs as a national resource preserve.

"Analysis of the barracuda indicates pesticides are getting far offshore and probably into the deeper aspects of the Gulf of Mexico," Dr. Bright noted.

He said the barracuda probably never ventured closer to shore than the Flower Gardens.

Detailed analysis of the fish's brain indicated 15 parts per million of DDT residues, which Bright described as "a pretty high level."

He said such a level might be significant in influencing the fish's behavior.

The analysis also revealed a DDT concentration of .6 parts per million in the liver and .17 in muscle tissue.

Bright noted a .09 concentration was recently discovered in the muscle tissue of a dolphin caught 80 miles off the coast of Charleston, S.C.

"A comparison would indicate concentrations are slightly greater in the Gulf of Mexico, because of its enclosed nature and also because of the greater river dis-

Meats team wins first

The senior meats team edged 21 other schools to take first place in the International Meats Judging Contest Tuesday (Dec. 1) in Madison, Wis.

Second went to the University of Illinois, third to Kansas State University, and fourth to South Dakota State University.

Team members are Ronny Allen and Danny Brown of Abilene, Ira Lee of Willow City, Norman Kohls of Boerne, Leon Kothmann of Art, and Burley Smith of Wichita Falls.

Coach Russell Cross of the A&M Animal Science Department said Allen and Lee were high point individuals, respectively, in the overall contest.

What's more British than the Queen?

No disrespect intended, mum, but Alfie's is as authentically English as you! Our fish, so crisp and golden, served steaming hot. The crusty, flaky, fried potatoes that verily melt in your mouth. And Alfie's secret sauce, so grand it makes grown men weep for more. Alfie's fish & chips. No wonder it's said, "There's a grand bit of Great Britain in every bite!"
