Virus may be reason behind last week's surge in absences

A surge of absences last Wednesday and Thursday may have been due to a 24-hour virus, Dr. Kenneth L. Nelson, director of the University Hospital, said Monday.

"The virus has been responsible for illness throughout the community," he said.

Fred W. Dollar, director of Food Services, put much time and money into an extensive study of food conditions, but determined that no illness could have resulted from the meals served in Duncan or Sbis Dining Halls, Nelson

"At first we thought it might be the result of physical exertion causing stomach cramping," he said, "but later it was clear that the illness was medical; probably a virus which spread rapidly and could hit anybody."

The cases reported to the hospital were evenly distributed through all classes, in both the corps and civilian areas, Nelson said.

Twenty-five students were detained in the hospital for observation for a short time Wednesday.

 tion," said Charles Gilliam, a freshman from Palestine.
 "It needed to be torn down and replaced, but I wished they had left the front part as some kind of memorial," Dave Bloxom, an Architecture ED student, said.
 Many people thought something should have been left as a memorial. But as a break from classes, the crowd seemed to enjoy the show.

 One memorial has been kept out of the old building — the building's cornerstone. Many students felt that the memorial inscriptions on the outside of the hall should be kept.

 "I know that the building is old and outdated, and that a new one is being built which is completely modernized, but I am hoping that at least one memorial will be kept and placed in the new building," said James Jones, senior.
 When the new building is completed, hopefully in about two years, it will easily be the most modern building on A&M's campus.
