A&M supporting Sea Grant, Dr. Williams tells committee

Texas A&M's commitment to be the state's leader in marine resources development was announced today by President Dr. Jack K. Williams to a top-level advisory committee of the National Sea Grant Program.

"Texas A&M University has committed its resources to the goal of becoming a Sea Grant College," Williams said in a review of the university's Sea Grant and marine resources program.

The presentation was made to the National Sea Grant Advisory Panel and top-level representatives of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) holding a two-day meeting on the university campus. The National Sea Grant Program is a part of NOAA, newly-created segment of the Department of Commerce.

Robert B. Abel, director of the National Sea Grant Program, said in opening the session that the panel is "particularly interested in Texas A&M's program since the kinds of issues presented in today's meeting will serve as a model for the National Sea Grant Program.

"Texas A&M has involved representatives from industry, government and other universities, as well as a cross-section of its own university talent in its marine resource development program," Abel added. "This is what the Sea Grant Panel hopes to bring about on a national scale."

Dr. John C. Calhoun Jr., director of Texas A&M's Sea Grant Program, began the meeting with a review of Sea Grant Program accomplishments throughout the university system.

"We believe our program has fulfilled all the requirements currently under consideration by the advisory panel for the designation of Texas A&M as a Sea Grant College," Calhoun said.

He said that although the National Sea Grant Program and College Act (1966), which created the university's program, called for designation of Sea Grant Colleges, none have yet been named. He noted that among the 12 colleges and universities receiving institutional awards, Texas A&M currently holds the second largest.

The university is in its third year as a Sea Grant institution and received $1.1 million in federal funds for 1970-71. Next year's program will receive $1.4 million. Federal funds make up two-thirds of the Sea Grant Program, with the state and other non-federal sources providing the remaining one-third. Total program effort this year is $1.6 million.

Egypt makes plan for end of cease-fire, but won't tell

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Egypt announced Wednesday it had decided on its course of action after expiration of the Middle East cease-fire but refused to say what that course would be.

The armies of Egypt, Jordan and other Arab states were on alert, and Israel shored up its defenses along the Suez Canal. But sources in Beirut, Lebanon, and elsewhere in the Middle East remained hopeful that the six-month truce would be extended when the deadline arrives Friday midnight along the Suez Canal and the River Jordan.

Cairo radio said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will make known his government's decision at an emergency session of Egypt's parliament Thursday evening.

Egypt's public position has been that it will not renew the cease-fire, unless progress is registered at the Middle East peace talks going on under the auspices of U.N. special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring in New York.

But Egyptian leaders have indicated that, even without a truce extension, Cairo would not order a resumption of fighting, unless Egypt is attacked. Israel has said it will not fire the first shot if the truce ends.

Cairo radio said Egypt's position was decided upon Tuesday at a meeting of the Higher Defense Council headed by Sadat. The president relayed that decision Wednesday to the Central Committee of the Arab Socialist Union — ASU — Egypt's only political party.

Israel has already agreed to prolong the cease-fire and Jordan has served formal notice it will follow Egypt's suit either way on the issue.

Reading machines open to students

A students reading improvement program aimed at helping increase academic proficiency is available in the university's residence halls and dorms.

Sponsored by the Counseling and Testing Center directed by S. Auston Kerley, the program is offered on a voluntary basis.

It requires about 10 hours of a student's time, spread over a month of two to three half-hour sessions a week.

"It is a proven fact that one's reading skill is a major factor in determining success or failure in all facets of academic work," said Jim Davis, who handles the center program.

With the semester just beginning, this is a good time to investigate the program and start improving study skills, he added.

Students should contact their residence hall president or scholastic officer for information and use of reading machines and material.

Additional information can be obtained by contacting Davis at the Counseling and Testing Center, 107 Academic Building.
