'70 census shows South loses blacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — New data from the 1970 census showed Wednesday that blacks still left the South in the 1960s, but whites moved into the region in even greater numbers. The result: the South registered a population gain through migration of about 500,000, the first such gain since Civil War times. The data released by the Bureau of the Census gave the final population count of Negroes in the United States in 1970 as 22,672,570, up 20 per cent from 1960. The white population grew by 12 per cent, to 177,612,309. The Negro portion of the U. S. population in 1970 was 11.2 per cent, compared to 10.5 per cent in 1960 and 9.8 per cent in 1940. The bureau reported also fewer crowded homes in 1970 and a big drop in the number of housing units lacking basic plumbing facilities. Secretary of Commerce Maur-

Spanking experiments fake, 'researcher' pays

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Would you agree to accept a spanking for $15, in the interest of scientific research on the sexual reactions of such a spanking? Thirteen Northwestern University coeds did. Some said later they became suspicious, after a couple half-hour research sessions, of the young spanker's unprofessional conduct and enthusiasm for his work, and even more so when their $15 checks bounced. But — in the end — they collected, with the help of Northwestern's security police and the state's attorney's office, $30 each. It began with an advertisement in the Daily Northwestern student newspaper. It offered girls 18 to 26 a chance to earn $15 for a half hour participation in "research discussion groups."

Of 100 girls who responded, the group leader selected 13 for his scholarly work on their sexual response to spankings while lying across his knee. He said the research was in behalf of G & S Love Industries. Each girl was to tell him of some recent misbehavior and was to receive the number of spanks he thought the offense deserved. He warned them they must not discuss the project with outsiders. That, he said, was a 20-spank offense. After the open-hand research, the spanker discussed it with the subjects. "I like to spank girls," he was quoted. "That was terribly erotic." Some coeds protested that the spankings hurt, but their main complaint was that their first $15 checks were no good. They consulted the security office, which in turn consulted the state's attorney and the researcher. The settlement was $30 in the form of cashable checks for each subject. The security office said it ascertained that there is no G & S Love Industries and that the spanker has an arrest record for armed robbery, possession of stolen goods, burglary and forgery — but no convictions. He still hasn't. None of the girls wanted to prosecute.

Third graders vote to 'adopt' lonely elderly

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Twenty-six San Antonio third graders have volunteered to become pen pals with elderly people here who need a friend. The youngsters, members of Mrs. Sarah Cannon's class at an elementary school, decided to take on the task after reading a newspaper story on problems of the elderly. The article told how the police dispatcher's office here receives regular calls from elderly people who have no one else to turn to in times of loneliness or despair.
