Capp says young sneer at radicals

DALLAS (AP) — Cartoonist Al Capp, a loud and frequent critic of the younger generation, said Tuesday high school kids are now "sneering" at college student leaders who incite campus violence and disruptions. He said this was a very favorable development.

"The high schoolers will not have any part of their filth of mind, body and spirit," the humorist and satirist told the 50th anniversary meeting of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

While quick to indict campus radicals, Capp said perhaps only five per cent of the nation's college students are "hopelessly demented."

But, he said, "A five-per cent cancer, in an academic body or a human body, if not checked, will eventually kill you."

Capp closed the three-day publishers convention on a rousing note, sharpshooting on a variety of targets such as welfare, politicians, protesters, student draft deferments and drugs.

He zeroed in on what he called the "faculty Fagins," the revolutionary-minded university and college professors who he asserted are to blame for a "corrupted, swindled generation."

He called such radical professors "cheap, weak, cowardly punks."

Capp, the creator of the comic strip Lil Abner, suggested that any student dissatisfied with the nation's universities "has the right to get the hell out." He said the dismissal of a Stanford professor involved in a campus protest was a favorable sign. He also took anthropologist Margaret Mead to task for her statement that "marijuana itself is not harmful." Capp suggested that jumping off the Empire State Building is not in itself harmful, "but it's where they both end that hurts."

He led off his remarks by asking the youthful members of the audience to be "gentle" with him because "I'm not young enough to know everything."

Authentic still part of class

Jim Bundren of Bryan uses a still and samples of "white lightning" to educate police officers about moonshiners and the hazards of illegal alcohol.

Bundren, Alcoholic Beverage Commission agent for this area, Monday used a captured still to show 20 officers how they can aid investigations into illegal booze.

The officers are enrolled in the Brazos Valley Development Council-sponsored 140-hour basic police course here.

"People are surprised, but most law enforcement officers have never seen a still," Bundren explained.

He said officers who are able to identify the characteristics of the home brew can give vital information to liquor control agents.

Bundren exhibited a still captured 20 miles northeast of Houston last year. The moonshiner got away.

Bundren said he has found stills with dead rats and insects in the mash, and some moonshiners use acids to increase yields.

State Guard unit recruiting members

Officers and enlisted men for the 203rd Battalion, Texas State Guard, are currently being recruited by Ira E. Scott, the unit's new commander.

Scott, who heads the Police Training Division of the Engineering Extension Service at Texas A&M, said the headquarters will include 10 officers and seven enlisted men. He is also staffing four security units in Bryan, Huntsville, Columbus and Brenham.

The 203rd Battalion is a part of the 2nd Defense Group with headquarters in Houston. Reassignment of the battalion from Houston to Bryan is now in process, Scott said.

"The Texas State Guard is a part of the State Militia," Scott pointed out. "Our main function is to take charge of Texas National Guard Armories and all state property associated with the Guard when the National Guard is called to active duty."

The Texas State Guard is all volunteers, Scott said, with the men receiving no pay except when called to active duty.

Drills will be held two nights each month.

Interested persons in those counties can contact their local National Guard unit for information on the Texas State Guard, Scott said.

EES employe named to committee

Henry D. Smith of the Engineering Extension Service staff has been appointed a member of the International Association of Fire Chiefs' Training and Education Committee.

The Texas A&M employe heads the Texas Firemen's Training School and is chairman of the nine-member Texas Commission on Fire Protection, Personnel Standards and Education.

Smith's latest appointment was made by Chief Matthew Jimenez of the Hayward (Calif.) Fire Department, IAFC president.

Smith has been with the Engineering Extension Service 21 years, including 14 as chief instructor.

He serves on many national and state fire service associations and is advisor to the Mexico National Safety Congress.

Geophysics receives $2,000 from Texaco

Texaco has awarded a $2,000 grant to the Geophysics Department.

The award was presented by D. R. Witherspoon, supervising geophysicist for the oil company's Domestic Production Department in Houston.

Witherspoon said the funds could be used for any activities deemed appropriate by the university.

Dr. Terry W. Spencer, Geophysics Department head, formally accepted the grant.

Reaccreditation group planned

An official of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Gordon W. Sweet, will visit here today and Thursday to help organize a self-study program.

Sweet, executive secretary of the association's Commission on Colleges, will meet with the steering committee of Texas A&M's newly created Committee for Reaffirmation of Accreditation.

The self-study project is conducted once every 10 years by members of the Southern Association, the regional accrediting agency for 11 Southern and Southwestern states, as part of the reaccreditation process.

Texas A&M President Jack K. Williams is chairman of the association's Commission on Colleges.
