

Squadron, company commanders named

Squadron and company commanders of the 1971-72 Corps of Cadets have been announced.

The 36 commanders, recommended by battalion commanders through Army officer advisors to the commandant, will be seniors and cadet majors.

They will officially take command May 8 at Final Review. Squadron and company commanders are highly important to the functioning of the corps, Col. Jim H. McCoy said. They represent the most direct communication with and control of corps members.

Aggie golfers meet SMU

The Texas Aggie golf team closes out its home dual match season today when it meets Southern Methodist in a match that will go a long way towards deciding how high up the Southwest Conference ladder the Aggies finish.

A&M is already eliminated from championship consideration with only Arkansas having a shot at catching Texas Tech. Arkansas has lost fewer matches than the Raiders but have 12 matches to go while Tech has finished its season. The Aggies currently have a 14-10 mark and SMU is 19-11 for the season.

Coach Henry Ransom is expected to send out his top four golfers, Steve Veriato, Tommy Shelton and Mike Machemehl. SMU is led by the conferences leading returning medalist in last years medal tourney, Steve Atgelt. Mike Hubinger, Jimmy Wheler and David Montgomery make up the rest of the SMU foursome.

Annex becoming small university

Operations through the Engineering Extension Service at the Research Annex have grown to the point enrollments resemble a small university.

Through the leadership of EES Director H. D. Bearden, two Research Annex extension schools currently average eight to 12 per class each with class length from one to eight weeks each.

The Telephone Technicians Training, Electric Line Crews Training and CATV Training programs, all headed by chief instructor Ed Kerlick, and the Police Training Division headed by Ira E. Scott project 1,330 students will attend Annex extension classes during 1971-72.

Kerlick maintains these courses have a tremendous economic impact on the university and Bryan-College Station area. "We estimate the average class spends 12 class nights here," Kerlick said. "This means the extension courses produce 15,960 nights lodgings in this area, and about three times as many meals."

Almost all the people attending the courses use commercial motels and hotels, although the Navajo Indian students enrolled in the telephone courses stay in university-furnished rooms in the former enlisted men's barracks at the air base converted for A&M's use.

Kerlick said activity at the annex is near peak this week. EES staff instructors are broken into two classes for a week's session to fulfill vocational teacher certification requirements. There are also three telephone technicians courses and one line crew class. Next week a cable antenna television (CATV) technician class reports.

At the same time, the Institute of Electronic Science, an 18-month technical program, has three classes with 68 students for the spring session.

Kerlick projected 1971-72 classes would include 160 CATV students, 130 attending linemen school, 650 telephone technicians and 390 enrolled in Police courses, all at the Research Annex.

Although all programs are underwritten by training committees from the industries or professions, Kerlick pointed out no state funds can be spent to provide housing for the classes.

And with the Annex located 12 miles from the campus, there is a transportation problem, he added.

Kerlick reports the 1971-72 budgets approved by his three training committees include $139,000 for telephone classes, $39,000 for the CATV program and $163,000 for the electric linemen. Of that amount, $289,000 comes directly from industry and the remainder is reimbursements for expenses.

Kerlick estimated the short course enrollment would just about double within the next five years.
