Students can get required vaccines at campus hospital

Texas A&M students who have not received the four required dread diseases immunizations are eligible to obtain the vaccines at the University Hospital, Dean of Students James P. Hannigan announced Monday.

There will be a small charge for the vaccine, Hannigan said, but no charge for the service.

All students entering public and private colleges now must be immunized against polio, diphtheria, tetanus and smallpox. The new immunization requirements were included in two bills passed by the 62nd Legislature.

A&M officials have said students will be allowed to enter the university during the fall term provided their immunizations against at least one of the four diseases will be started by Jan. 1, 1972, and completed as soon as medically feasible.

However, students may be excused from compliance for medical or religious reasons. It requires an affidavit signed by a physician, a minor student's parent or guardian or an adult student stating the reason for exemption.

Police Training sets 2 courses

Texas A&M University's Police Training Division will be conducting two advanced law enforcement courses for the Brazos Valley Development Council during August, reports Chief Instructor Ira E. Scott.

A two-week report writing class began Aug. 2 in Hearne and a police psychology program begins Aug. 16 in Navasota.

Scott said 10 area officers are attending the report writing class in the Hearne No. 1 Fire Station.

Classes meet from 8 a. m. until noon daily, under the direction of Instructor Russell Coleman.

Bob Dickey will teach the police psychology sessions from 8 a. m. until noon Aug. 16-27 in Navasota.

Scott said the courses are funded by the Texas Criminal Justice Council through the seven-county BVDC. Officers from throughout the council area may attend, he added.

Atlantic Richfield gives $7,000

Atlantic Richfield officials came to the Texas A&M University campus Wednesday to present the oil company's annual grant of $7,000 in its aid to education program.

ARCO grants to A&M now total $30,500. A&M President Dr. Jack K. Williams said at a luncheon honoring the visitors, F. W. Turner, manager of the company's Southeast Texas-Offshore producing district, gave the latest check to A&M.

Rehabilitation center gets Moody grant

The Brazos Valley Rehabilitation Center at Bryan has received $60,000 from The Moody Foundation of Galveston to expand its facilities for the handicapped.

Expansion plans call for adding hydrotherapeutic pools, audiological testing facilities and other devices to the center's services.

The hospital, established in 1957, furnishes a wide range of psychological and medical programs and is the only out-patient rehabilitation facility in the Bryan area.

Vocational Guidance Institute planned

Institutes for certification of school vocational counselors will be conducted in Amarillo, Galveston and Lubbock this fall by Texas A&M and the Texas Education Agency.

The Vocational Guidance Institutes will offer courses to satisfy TEA certification requirements for vocational counselors.

Dr. Christopher A. Borman of educational psychology and Dr. Donald R. Herring of agricultural education are institute co-directors. Dr. Thomas H. Hohenshil also will be an institute instructor.

The three faculty members will conduct four-hour sessions one night a week for 12 weeks beginning the first week of September. About 75 participants are expected to register on Aug. 23 and 24.
