Irish terrorists continue attacks

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—Irish terrorists launched a new round of bullet and bomb attacks Wednesday in defiance of an appeal from three prime ministers for an end to violence. A British soldier was wounded.

Snipers fired four shots at troopers patrolling the Roman Catholic Ardoyne area, hitting one of them.

Terrorists also exchanged fire with troops in sporadic clashes, bombed a bus depot, and fired a three-foot antitank rocket at an army post, but missed the target. There were no casualties in any of these predawn outbursts.

The renewed violence flared within hours after Prime Ministers Edward Heath of Britain, Jack Lynch of the Irish Republic and Brian Faulkner of Northern Ireland issued a joint appeal for peace in Ulster, official name of the six Northern Irish counties under British rule.

The three-way summit, the first of its kind in 46 years made no headway toward a political settlement beyond an agreement to keep talking. The outlawed Irish Republican Army—IRA—which claims responsibility for much of the terror in Ulster, immediately served notice that what it called "inconclusive" talks were not good enough.

The IRA wants to force the British out of Ulster and reunite the largely Protestant province with the predominantly Roman Catholic Irish Republic to the south, by force if necessary. IRA spokesmen vowed Wednesday to continue the fighting that has taken 110 lives in the past two years, 24 of them British troops.

Cathal Goulding, Dublin-based chief of the IRA's official wing said his men would continue to use guns and bombs "to defend nationalist areas" in the North.

Goulding appeared on Dublin television to issue the threat despite the fact that the IRA technically outlawed in both parts of divided Ireland.

The three prime ministers agreed in London that the violence should cease, that internment of suspected IRA terrorists without trial should end, and that the base of the Northern Irish government should be broadened to include representatives of the Catholic minority.

Faulkner and the Irish Protestants take the view that the violence should end before internment. Lynch and the Irish Catholics want an end to internment as a first step.

In Dublin, Kevin Boland, a former Cabinet minister in the Lynch government, said he would oppose any deal with Britain that falls short of Irish reunification.

In Belfast, Faulkner is under strong pressure from militant Protestants like the Rev. Ian Paisley to reject any move weakening Ulster's link with Britain.

U. S. undertakes new program to shut off heroin from Asia

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is undertaking a new international drug-control program aimed at shutting off the flow of heroin to the United States from Asia before it assumes serious proportions.

The plan involves several U.S. agencies under State Department guidance and is based on the assumption that the expected drastic reduction in the opium-poppies crops of Turkey and other East Mediterranean areas will force drug dealers to seek alternate sources for their product, particularly in Southeast Asia.

The new program is under the working direction of Philip Vandivier, a 25-year State Department veteran and Asian specialist, who was given the assignment early last month as part of the Nixon administration's stated drug goal of eliminating drug traffic into the United States.

Vandivier returned last week from nearly a month's tour of Asia to "find out exactly what the problems are and what resources are available from both the United States and other governments."

His organization still is formulating its role and working on a system, but Vandivier said he will learn the Asian problem requires an approach different from that taken in Turkey.

The basic theme of the Turkey program is the elimination of the opium-poppy, a major cash crop for farmers there. The United States has promised Turkey financial and advisory aid to compensate for any economic loss resulting from eliminating poppy growing.

Entries for Aggie Rodeo will be accepted till Friday

Entries for the Annual All-Aggie Rodeo, to be held Oct. 7, 8 and 9, at 8 p.m. in the Bryan Rodeo Arena, will not be accepted after Friday, Oct. 1.

One highlight of the rodeo will be a "steer-dressing" event which will involve a timed event where teams, sponsored by dorms and battalions, will clothe a steer and lead it to a finish line.

Regular events will include bareback bronc riding, bull riding, saddle bronc riding, calf roping, ribbon roping, steer wrestling, and girls' barrel racing.

Entry blanks may be picked up from Mr. Dave Golden at the Horse Center, located off Jester Street across the railroad tracks.
