Class of '41 to hold 30th reunion this weekend

Approximately 300 members of the 1941 class will hold their 30th reunion here this weekend. The Friday and Saturday programs include attendance at the A&M-SMU football game Saturday afternoon.

A spokesman for the A&M Association of Former Students reports the 1941 class is one of the most successful groups ever to graduate. Membership includes a long list of successful businessmen and public officials.

Activities begin Friday with a social-buffet at 6:30 p.m. in the Ramada Inn. Special guests will be A&M deans. Saturday's program has a brunch business meeting, student speakers, class picture, campus tour and observing the Corps of Cadets march-in at 12:20 p.m.

The theme is "Orientation and Today's Student."

Participation is expected from more than 200 college administrators. Program highlights include a discussion of student orientation programs, including an all-student panel, and reports on ideal programs designed to bring personal feelings into orientation.

Dr. Ron Darby received an award for the best fundamental paper of the year from the South Texas Section of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers for his paper entitled "Transient and Steady State Rheological Properties of Very Dilute Drag Reducing Polymer Solutions," published in the Transactions of the Society of Rheology.

A professor of chemical engineering at A&M has written a paper which may be of importance to ship hull manufacturers and possibly to fire fighters and waste treatment plants.

Dr. Charles E. McCandless, associate dean of liberal arts at A&M, will attend the 24th annual National Orientation Directors Conference Nov. 7-9 at Oklahoma State University.

Dr. Williams will address the Texas Breakfast Club of Washington, D. C., Thursday.

The club, which meets in the Sam Rayburn Building on Capitol Hill, is primarily composed of Texas congressmen, administrative assistants and other government officials with Texas ties.

Dr. Williams is expected to include in his remarks a briefing on the university and the A&M University System.

He will be introduced by Rep. Olin E. Teague of College Station.

A&M Professors present paper

A paper concerning water pollution control and use of water resources was presented at the annual meeting of the American Water Resources Association in Washington, D. C. recently. The paper, entitled "Integrated Management of Quantity and Quality of Urban Water Resources," was authored by Dr. C. S. Shih, associate professor, and Dr. W. L. Meier, Jr., professor, both of the department of industrial engineering at A&M.

The paper presents a total water quality-quantity management approach to the use of water resources, including cost factors. The paper will be published in the Water Resources Bulletin, the journal of the American Water Resources Association.
