NEW DELHI (AP) — Ten civilians were killed when Pakistani forces shelled a village border town 50 miles northeast of Calcutta, the government claimed Wednesday.

The artillery attack Monday, a government communique said, hit the town of Bongaon, which is in an area heavily populated with Bengali refugees from East Pakistan.

Earlier that day, the government charged, Pakistani troops fired small arms and mortars at another border town in West Bengal State also about 50 miles northeast of Calcutta. No casualties were reported.

A platoon of Pakistani soldiers intruded into Indian territory Monday in northwest Bengal in an apparent attempt to attack a small village, the communique said. An Indian army patrol rushed to the village and a brief firefight erupted before the Pakistanis fled, the communique added.

That same day, according to the communique, three refugees were killed by Pakistani shelling of a small village in Tripura, the northeastern Indian state.

Tuesday, the Pakistanis shelled the town of Agartala in Tripura, the government charged, killing one civilian and wounding three.

In Parliament, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government said that in the event of a conflict with Pakistan, citizens would be permitted to possess firearms. Currently there are strict laws against possession of firearms.

First coed joins UT ROTC

AUSTIN (AP)—When the University of Texas Air Force ROTC detachment issued uniforms for incoming cadets this semester, one uniform needed some adjustments—the skirt was too short.

The uniform was for Carol Lynn Christen, the first female cadet in the university's corps.

"We also had to go to Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio to get the uniform," she said. "I guess they weren't prepared to take me on."

The Air Force officers who lead the corps, however, said they were very pleased to have their first female cadet in the program. "She may keep some of our other cadets on their toes," said Col. Tom Campbell, administrative officer for the detachment.

Miss Christen, however, doesn't think her presence has had much effect on the other cadets. "Most guys in Air Force ROTC are polite and gentlemanly anyway," she said.

Although not contemplating becoming a jet fighter pilot, Miss Christen said she is interested in pursuing an Air Force career, possibly as a space system analysis officer.

"This would mean working with computers to plot satellite orbits or study missile defenses," she said.

Miss Christen, a freshman math major from Houston, said she plans to remain in ROTC throughout her college career.

FCC cable TV rules are 'milestone,' advisor says

DALLAS (AP) — A presidential advisor on communications told a group of broadcasters Wednesday that a recent compromise on proposed FCC rules governing cable television "could be a most significant milestone for the electronic media."

Clay T. Whitehead, director of President Nixon's office of telecommunications policy, told a regional conference of the National Association of Broadcasters that the compromise "would permit cable television to expand while preserving the continued availability of programming offered by local television broadcast stations."

Whitehead said the proposed compromise change in FCC rules covering cable television (CATV) was worked out under the aegis of his office and agreed on last week by representatives of the broadcast industry, the cable TV industry and program producers.

Cable television firms use towers and cables to bring TV viewers clearer pictures and more channels than they normally would get with their rooftop antennae. Cable users pay a fee for the service.

In announcing the compromise last week in Washington, a spokesman for the National Cable Television Association said the agreement states that cable TV firms could provide two extra channels that viewers normally don't get with rooftop antennae in 100 markets areas across the country.

The compromise limits the choice of the two channels to stations relatively near the market area, the spokesman said.

"The settlement also achieves other important public interest goals," Whitehead told the broadcasters in Dallas. "It deals for the first time with the importation of distant radio signals and provide exclusivity protection for copyrighted television programs."

"The settlement assures the economic viability of the existing television program production companies and encourages new ones to enter the field."

"It does this by enabling them to collect copyright fees from cable operators and to sell adequate exclusivity protection to broadcasters."

"We believe the public has a substantial interest in fostering a diversity of program sources in this manner."

"In our view, copyright and programming were not incidental, they were central to the compromise. This reflects the view that government policy must treat the electronic media from the public's viewpoint. We do this when we focus on the program services offered and not the means of transmission."

"But where's the programming going to come from? What incentives are we going to use to encourage new program sources?"

"Will the availability of many cable channels simply make worse the scarcity of attractive programs or will it spur development of the kinds of programming not available today?"

"These are the appropriate questions government can ask about programs—not how can we manipulate each station's or cable system's programming, but how can we encourage program diversity and choice so that kind of manipulation won't be necessary?"
