Forest economist Muench to speak Monday, Tuesday

Dr. John Muench Jr., forest economist for the National Forest Products Association, will speak Monday and Tuesday at A&M.

The program is sponsored by the Forest Science Department's Visiting Lecturer Series and the Society of American Foresters' Visiting Scientist Program.

Dr. Muench will address the monthly meeting of the Brazos-Trinity Group of SAF at 6:30 p.m. Monday in the Ponderosa Motel. His topic is "Politics Among the Trees."

Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. he will lecture on "The Forest, Human Welfare and Space Ship Earth" in Library Room 226.

Dr. Muench is a member of the NFPA staff representing the forest industry before Congress and federal agencies.

Educated at Penn State and Duke, he taught forestry at Penn State for eight years and joined NFPA in 1965 to handle timber supply information.

Japanese soldier returns home from World War II

TOKYO (AP) — Soldier Shoichi Yokoi came home from World War II on Wednesday with his rifle, a salute and an apology to Emperor Hirohito.

Rather than surrender to his American enemy, Yokoi held out for the last 28 years in the jungles of Guam. He was found there last Thursday, fishing for his food. He is now 56 and this is his first look at his homeland since the war.

"I have returned although I feel shame," he said. "I've come back to report to the Japanese people about the fighting and my experiences in Guam because I don't know what wars we may encounter again." "I brought back the rifle entrusted to me by the honorable emperor which I want to return. I want to report that I am sorry I did not serve his majesty to my satisfaction."

Yokoi was extended a hero's welcome as he walked down the ramp from a jetliner that flew him from the tiny Pacific island.

It was his first visit home in 31 years, having been transferred to Guam from the Manchurian front.

On Guam, Yokoi lived in a tunnel he dug in the jungle underground and survived on breadfruit, coconuts, snails, rats' livers, shrimps and frogs. He made his clothes out of tree barks.

He kept time by marking a tree trunk every full moon. He stocked his cave with coconuts, which proved invaluable during typhoons.

After his capture, Yokoi told officials he was aware of Japan's surrender in World War II from leaflets and newspapers scattered about the island. But he refused to surrender. He obeyed the old imperial military code to die rather than live in disgrace as a prisoner.

Accompanying Yokoi back home were the ashes of two of his wartime buddies—Mikio Shichi and Satoru Nakahata—who died from malnutrition eight years ago.

He said his first plane ride was like riding in a train the first sight of Mt. Fuji made tears to his eyes.

Asked what he thought of war, Yokoi pounded a table and said, "Japan lost in the war because it lacked warships, planes and not because of lack of fighting spirit."

Yokoi, his eyes red from tears told newsmen when he reached his health he will console souls of the war dead and the families of comrades who died in Guam.

From the airport news conference Yokoi was taken to Tokyo National Hospital where he will undergo medical observation for some time before returning to his home town in Goya in central Honshu.

Yokoi has back pay of 50,000 yen awaiting him. Today's exchange rates this is $162. But he already has received an outpouring of gifts and donations that amount to more than $162,000.

Seminars for municipal inspectors scheduled

Five regional seminars for municipal inspectors have been scheduled by the Engineering Extension Service at A&M.

George Stock, coordinator of the Municipal Inspectors Training School here, announced the 15-hour training programs will be held in Weslaco, San Marcos, Port Arthur, Kilgore and Abilene.

Almost every city within these regions will be sending inspectors to the seminars, Stock pointed out.

The program opened this week in Weslaco. Dates for the other seminars include: San Marcos, Feb. 22-23; Port Arthur, March 7-8; Kilgore, March 28-29, and Abilene, April 4-5.

Sponsor of the training is the Building Officials Association of Texas, in cooperation with the Texas Department of Community Affairs and the Texas Education Agency.

Stock said the training is aimed at increasing the proficiency of city inspectors by providing them with understanding of building fundamentals.

In addition, the staff inspectors will emphasize the development of attitudes and approaches which will lead to the use of efficient and effective inspection techniques, Stock said.

The seminars will cover building construction as it relates to building codes, mechanical and electrical codes, interpretation and enforcement and uniform practices.
