Three Aggies drafted for pro football

Aggies Doug Neill and David Hoot were drafted in the 12th Round of the National Football League player Wednesday, joining teammate Leonard Forey as prospective professional players from A&M.

Hoot, a defensive back, was picked by the Los Angeles Rams, while Neill, a running back, was tabbed by the Chicago Bears. Forey, an offensive lineman, went in the sixth round Tuesday to the Cleveland Browns.

If signed, Hoot will be joining Dave Elmendorf as a Los Angeles Ram. Ross Brubacher, a linebacker, is the only Aggie playing for the Chicago Bears. There are no A&M players with the Browns.

Texas college and university players picked in the final 10 rounds of the draft Wednesday are listed below.

Charles Bolden forgotten by many people, but Dallas Cowboys draft him in sixth round

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—A lot of people forgot about Charles Bolden, but not the professional football World Champion Dallas Cowboys.

Bolden, 23, was a surprise selection Tuesday by the Cowboys in the National Football League draft.

"I wasn't surprised I was picked," said Bolden, "but in the sixth round?"

Bolden, a defensive back, has not played college football since the spring of 1969 when he was dropped from the University of Iowa squad for what then Coach Ray Nagel termed "personal reasons."

The former Tennessee all-stater dropped out of the collegiate football scene, but played semi-pro the last two years with Quad-Cities of the Midwest Professional Football League.

Bolden, 6-foot-3, 195 pounds, said the Cowboys contacted him a year ago and phoned two weeks ago to say they might select him in the draft.

"I didn't have any concept what went on in the draft," Bolden said. "If I would have been picked 435th I would have been pleased."

He said only the Cowboys and the New York Giants had contacted him about professional ball since he left the Iowa squad.

"I think I picked up quite a bit of experience playing the last two years," said the Memphis, Tenn., native. "But in pros there will be more good players at every position."

Bolden said he believes the Cowboys first scouted him when he was a sophomore back in 1968.

"I started all ten games as a sophomore, and that's pretty good in this conference" (Big Ten), he offered.

"He always was a good athlete," recalled Nagel, now the athletic director at Washington State. "I never had any argument with the way he played the game. I wouldn't be surprised to see him make the Cowboys."

If he had it all to do over again, would Bolden have preferred to play three years with the Hawkeyes?

"Had the present staff been here it might have been different," said the soft-spoken sociology major, "but it didn't work out that way so I'm not going to worry about it."

Bolden's days at Iowa spanned the turbulent time of the feud between Coach Nagel and then athletic director Forest Evashevski and a boycott of spring practice in 1969 by some blacks.

Bolden's selection brings to mind another rather obscure signing of the Cowboys in 1962.

Cornell Green, a basketball star at Utah State, was signed as a free agent. He went on to become an all-pro defensive back.

A&M secures commitments from high school footballers

Several outstanding high school prospects have already made oral commitments to play college football at A&M.

Among these are Earnest (Bubba) Bean, a 6-0, 190-pound running back from Kirbyville; Ronnie Garrison, a 6-1, 208-pound defensive end from Stark High in Orange; Tony Blankenship, a 6-2, 175-pound running back from New Orleans Jesuit; Terry Crowover, a 6-2, 235-pound offensive and defensive guard from Lafayette, La.; Ted Ginsberg, a 6-1, 200-pound guard from Tyler Lee; Ronnie Hubby, a 5-10, 195-pound tailback from Clovis N. M.; Robert Johnson, a 6-2, 230-pound tackle from Austin McCallum; Carl Warneke, a 6-0, 200-pound guard and linebacker from Medina Valley High in Castroville; Bruce Welch, a 6-4, 250-pound center from Houston King.

Also, Robert Dobry, a 6-1, 185-pound quarterback from San Antonio Roosevelt; Jim Dolan, a 6-3, 215-pound tackle from San Marcos; Wayne Ittis, 6-2, 215-pound lineman from Medina Valley High in Castroville; Cliff Smith, a 5-11, 215-pound center from San Antonio Churchill; Richard Osborne, 6-4, 215-pound end from San Antonio Lee; Bucky Sams, Amarillo Tascosa running back; Charles Arndt, Cuero defensive back, and Dale Ammons, Pampa quarterback.

Southwest Conference signing day is Tuesday, Feb. 8.
