Fish to compete in drill meet Saturday in Laredo

Texas' top collegiate drill teams including the defending national champion Fish Drill Team of A&M open the spring competition season Saturday in Laredo.

Seven units will compete for the drill championship, held in conjunction with Laredo's George Washington Birthday Celebration.

The 37-member TAMU freshman team commanded by Mark Roberts of Killeen will seek a repeat Laredo championship. In the Saturday afternoon competition will be teams from Texas A&I, St. Mary's University, Sam Houston State, University of Texas at Austin, University of Houston and UT-Arlington.

Teams also will march in a

Saturday morning parade, among a weekend-long series of events in the Laredo celebration.

Competition at Laredo Martin High School will include inspection, basic and fancy marching phases. A Marine Corps panel of officers and non-commissioned officers will judge the drill competition. They will judge the UT competition and state championship meet at A&M later this spring.

Senior Advisor Louis Ullrich of San Antonio said 35 freshmen will march for the FDT this year, the largest group assembled at A&M. The Fish will march as a separate unit Thursday on campus for the SCONA XVII review.

The A&M team last year won the National Intercollegiate ROTC Drill Championships at Washington, D. C. It was the fourth straight national title by the A&M team that starts with all new members each fall.

Globetrotters will appear on March 22

The Harlem Globetrotters have settled on the date for their appearance at A&M.

The unique athletic ensemble will appear March 22 as a TAMU Special Attraction on the Town Hall program, Chairman Kirk Hawkins announced.

An 8 p.m. Wednesday contest in G. Rollie White Coliseum is scheduled for the clowns of basketball. The Globetrotters will be in their seventh appearance at TAMU.

Fall semester schedules and the A&M All-University Calendar showed conflicting dates for the Globetrotters. Hawkins said the change was required by a strike of the world-renowned team.

TAMU awards $4,900 grant to Midland School District

A&M has awarded a $4,900 grant to the Midland Independent School District for development of community education, a program supporting people-involving activities.

The grant is one of the first by the TAMU Community Education Center, established here last summer under contract with the Charles S. Mott Foundation.

A "seed money" award, the grant will be supplemented from local sources to acquire leadership in developing the West Texas city's community education program.

Midland Schools Supt. Dr. James Mailey accepted the grant from the TAMU center, organized in the Educational Administration Department of the College of Education. Dr. Robert I. Berridge directs the center.

Community education was developed through the Mott Foundation to provide activities at a central site—such as an after-hours unused school—for people of all age groups. Industry, business, schools, churches, civic groups and other local agencies cooperate in the program.

The Mott Foundation-backed concept takes advantage of the wasted public investment of locked schools. It opens classrooms, gyms and shops for crafts, vocational skill learning, health care training, continuing education or other activities indicated by community interest.

The Midland grant was drawn from a "seed money" component of the original Mott Foundation award to A&M's College of Education.

Arrangements leading to the Midland grant were assisted by Dr. J. W. Donaldson, director of the Region XVIII Educational Service Center in Midland.

Berridge emphasized that the grant is of seed nature to help Midland establish and support its own program. The program will be designed by the Midland director in cooperation with local groups to fit needs and interests of Midland citizens.

Berridge stressed that the community education concept does not give something for nothing, nor does it pour funding into a community. Moderate funds are provided only on a limited basis.

"A program helps people most when it encourages self-help," the TAMU center director said. "We usually just give a community a pat on the back and wish them good luck."
