Pitching, big innings give Aggies double win

By JOHN CURYLO
 Battalion Sports Editor

A big inning in each game of Wednesday's doubleheader with Iowa State, coupled with tough pitching and an errorless defense, gave the Aggie baseball team 7-3 and 13-2 wins in the first action of the season.

Charlie Kelley hurled the entire seven innings of the first game, giving up five hits and five walks to go with his 11 strikeouts. Bruce Katt threw eight of the nine frames in the second game, allowing no runs, two hits and two walks. The southpaw fanned eight.

In the first game, the fourth was the inning of plenty for A&M, with Coach Tom Chandler ushering 11 batters to the plate. Six of the seven hits came in this frame. Sandy Bate, Jim Hacker, Carroll Lilly and Terry Overton all hit singles to open the attack.

Kelley followed with a fielder's choice, before Jimmy Langford bunted one to Cyclone pitcher Mike Gillespie, who got the worst of the bad footing. Tommy O'Jibway got on when James made another of his four errors. R. J. Englert was given a base on a similar miscue by third baseman Mike Curran.

Butch Ghutzman popped to third, and Bate struck out, but Hacker's second base hit ended in a rundown of O'Jibway to end the spree. By this time, the plate had been dented six times on as many hits and three errors.

Katt faced only 27 batters in the eight innings he pitched, and Iowa State had only one man reach third and one other make it to second until the last inning. The Cyclones managed two fly balls for outs—one a pop foul to the catcher, Neil McKittrick and the other a short fly to Ghutzman at first—as the other batters went down on strikeouts or grounders.

Englert, hitless in four trips to the plate in the first game, connected four of the five times he batted in the second game. The center fielder had a double and two triples, in addition to driving in five runs and scoring four times.

Bate was three-for-four with two runs batted in and two scored, while Langford got two hits in five batting appearances and Ghutzman opened up for two base raps in four times at bat.

The eighth inning sealed the game, with nine Aggie runs being scored. Thirteen A&M players batted in the frame. The score was 4-0 after seven and one half frames, but five hits and two errors put it out of reach for the Cyclones.

Seven of the tallies came after two were out. A triple by Englert and an identical clout by Hacker, both to right-center field, did the damage. With the count 3-1 on Hacker, he swung intentionally at an off-target pitch to avoid being walked. He drove the next one into the power alley for the finishing touch of a 20-hit twinbill.

The two teams were scheduled to play another doubleheader today at 1 p.m., weather permitting. Jackie Binks and Bobby Wittkamp were tabbed as the starting pitchers. The Aggies travel to Huntsville for a 1 p.m. twinbill Saturday against Sam Houston.
