Editor:
 It's a little disappointing that our administration has never grown up. Face it! The male students of this university are stuck here in the dorms. The administration's finger is on us and we can not move without their permission. We're old enough now to make our own decisions to live where we want to live. Our Constitutional rights are being deprived by this school which is trying to decide the best studying atmosphere for us and which also wants us here just for the money . . . either reason is wrong! The school should have no right to control our life outside the classroom but they do. Grow up A&M administration, if it weren't for the Corps and the rednecks who follow you blindly, this school would be a hell of a lot better.
 Rise up and move off campus!

"the right of a state supported institution to require students to live and eat in campus facilities." It may be hard to agree with, but that is the highest you can take it.—Ed.

Director of the Texas Civil Liberties Union when he wrote me that, "As far as I have been able to determine the administration of Texas A&M University does not now nor historically hold the opinion that students have any civil rights whatsoever." I'll also remember that a few weeks later Dean Hannigan answered that no students rights were being violated. Yes, no matter how hard I try, I'll never be able to forget Texas A&M.

 It is nearing the end of the year, and those of us who are about to leave A&M begin to think back. People tell me I'll never forget my years at A&M—and they are right. I'll never forget the 'meals' I paid for but never ate, the athletic tickets bought but never used, the rent I paid for a room I did not want, the services I never used. I'll always remember that I gained the right to vote while I was here—but political campaigns are not allowed on campus. I'll always remember the narrow-minded administration which would not recognize the Campus Committee of Concern or the Civil Liberties Union because they were afraid of legitimate dissent. More than anything, I'll never forget the words of Wayne Oakes, Executive
