AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - One of the big secrets down through the years in Texas politics-where speaker candidates get their money-must be brought out in the open, Secretary of State Bob Bullock ruled Wednesday.

There are a number of loop-

tures to his office.

Candidates must account for their contributions and spending from the day they announced, Bullock said.

One candidate for speaker of the 1973 House, Rep. Price Daniel Jr., of Liberty, has been reporting his campaign finances voluntarily to Bullock every 60 days.

Speaker Rayford Price, who is seeking a full two-year term in the job next year, has not made a report.

"I have always indicated my willingness to abide by the statutory requirements, and will file whatever information necessary,' Price said after Bullock made his ruling.

Rep. Fred Head of Troup, another speaker candidate, also is running against Price for state representative from an East Texas district that includes Palestine.

Rep. Jim Nugent of Kerrville is considered a candidate although he has made no formal public announcement.

Speaker candidates never have been compelled before to report what their campaigns cost nor where they get their money. House members elect the speaker, so candidates usually must do considerable traveling to woo the other 149 representatives.

Bullock reasoned that the reporting law covers all of a candidate's finances since he is running simultaneously for speaker and for re-election to the House. But he added that he would not require a speaker candidate to separate the accounts in his speaker's race from those in his campaign for state representative.

Price has said he thinks it would require about $50,000 to run a successful campaign for

A matter of life

by Gordon Richardson

Computers, of course, are as familiar a part of the contemporary scene as . . . well, let's say miniskirts. And from one point of view quite as interesting.

There are, after all, limited uses for the miniskirt On the other hand, they keep finding new applications for the computer—one of which is extremely beneficial to the insurance counsellor and his client.

You can draw vivid financial portraits with them, for instance, faster and more accurately than ever before. Briefly, it works this way. Client provides counsellor with basic financial information. This is fed into the computer which, in turn, relates client's insurance to his entire financial situation.

In other words, in a very short time, you get a sharplyetched picture of how well your Social Security, your company benefits, and your other assets would serve in the event of retirement, disability, or death. How well, or how not so well.

At Provident Mutual Life, we call this Electronic Personal Planning, and, at your say so-with no obligation whatsoever-I'll be happy to have our computers whip up your likeness. Just give me a call at 707 University Drive Or call 846-7027.
