Smith entangled in nepotism confusion

AUSTIN (AP) — When Preston Smith said Wednesday that Ben Barnes and Frances Farenthold perhaps should resign for nepotism, he apparently forgot he hired Speaker Rayford Price's wife in 1965.

Senate payroll records show Barbara Price was paid $1,680 for working for Smith from Feb.
1, 1965 to May 31, 1965, when Smith was lieutenant governor.

"Maybe Ben Barnes and Sissy Farenthold should resign," the governor said in Brownsville.
After suggesting it, he said: "I'm not suggesting it, but it should be looked into."

Smith's remarks were prompted by the resignation of Sen. David Ratliff of Stamford, who hired several of his own relatives while he was in the legislature.

Earlier Wednesday, in Corpus Christi, Smith said: "I'm not saying that nepotism is wrong or right, but Mrs. Farenthold had them and Ben Barnes had them.

I'm kind of interested in this kinfolk thing. There might be some others who are guilty of it."

The nepotism law forbids legislators and other state officials to hire their relatives.

The law also outlaws the hiring by legislators of other relatives of other legislators. It makes no distinction between the House and the Senate.

But for years it was assumed that House members could hire relatives of senators and vice versa.

Atty. Gen. Crawford Martin cleared that up on April 18 with an opinion that declared the practice violated the nepotism statute, which carries a fine of $100 to $1,000.

Travis County Dist. Atty. Bob Smith said Thursday he did not have the resources to investigate the nepotism law cases in the legislature. At least 75 relatives of 45 legislators have worked on legislative payrolls sometime in the past five years.

The district attorney said he had talked with the House administration office and Secretary of the Senate Charles Schnabel and he is convinced they are sincere in their promises to eliminate the nepotism practice.

However, the grand jury will investigate any case where a legislator hired his own or another legislator's relative and that relative did no work for the salary received, the prosecutor said.

This would be theft of state money by false pretext, punishable by a prison term from two to 10 years, the district attorney said.

Ratliff and Rep. John Allen of Longview each hired two of the other's children at one time or other, and all four offspring have been reported as full-time students or employes in other jobs during all or part of the time they were on the state payroll.

When Barnes was speaker, his son, Greg, drew $5.50 as honorary pay for one day's work as a House page. Thereafter, Barnes paid him out of his own pocket.

Barnes' stepson, Scott, C. Sayers Jr., worked on the Senate payroll as a Capito (tour guide) for 25 days after Barnes married the boy's mother last year.

A&M prof authors book concerning brain functions

Dr. W. R. Klemm, biology professor, is the author of a new book entitled "Science, The Brain, and Our Future."

The 192-page book is included in the Pegasus Biological Sciences Curriculum Study Series published by the Bobbs-Merrill Company, Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind.

"This book provides a simple but thorough summary of present knowledge about brain functions, explains recent and impending breakthroughs and explores the social and moral significance of the results," the publishers note.

"Believing that brain research is and will continue to be a source of hope for many of society's ills, the author presents the scientific information necessary to understanding how such hopes can be made realities."

Dr. Klemm, who joined TAMU's Biology Department in 1966, had his book, "Animal Electroencephalography," published in 1969 by Academic Press of New York and London. He contributed two chapters to the eighth edition of "Dukes' Physiology of Domestic Animals" released in 1970 by Cornell University Press. He also was named that year to the editorial board of "Communications In Behavioral Biology."
