Englert wins with arm rather than bat

By JOHN CURYLO

The Aggies battled the Texas Longhorns in the late innings of all three games in Austin last weekend, but only a throw to the plate by A&M center fielder R. J. Englert saved the Aggies' lone victory, a 7-6 win in Friday's nightcap.

Umpires who admittedly were not calling corner strikes caused A&M to use 11 pitchers, only two of them twice, in the season finale. Texas used nine, two of them twice, also. There were 40 walks in the 25 innings played, with only 23 batters going out on strikes.

Mike Markl was probably the biggest offensive thorn in the side of the Aggies. The senior second baseman sealed his bid for another berth on the all-conference team by getting seven hits in 11 times at bat. He walked four times and scored three runs, in addition to getting credit for five putouts and 12 assists.

In the opening game in Clark Field, noted for its center field cliffs and a pair of walls in left field just above a slight rise and just short of the fence, Texas scored a run in each of the first two innings to get ace Ron Roznovsky an early lead.

A walk to 5-3 shortstop Amador Tijerina and a double by Markl to the base of the mountain in center field produced a run on David Chalk's fielder's choice. Bruce Katt toughened up, striking out the next two batters to end the inning.

In the second, Terry Pyka put one above the cliffs, and while Aggie outfielders were scaling the eight-foot protrusions, Pyka went to third with a triple. A sacrifice fly by Roznovsky brought him home.

In the sixth, Carroll Lilly walked on four pitches after two men were out. Englert got his only hit of the series, a 370-foot homer over the wall in right-center. The blast extended his hitting streak to 28 season and 16 conference games.

The Longhorns came back in the bottom half of the inning with a walk to Bill Berryhill, a single by Ken Pape and a double by Steve Clancy. A fly to center by Roznovsky brought Clancy rumberling to the plate. Englert's peg nailed him, but catcher Tommy Hawthorne dropped the ball after making the tag. The run didn't matter, as Roznovsky got the Aggies out with only a base on balls in the seventh.

Charlie Kelley ended his career at A&M on the happy note of the series, giving up five hits and four runs in five innings of the nightcap. The right hander hit two doubles and a single for three runs batted in. His hit output was the best of the weekend, with Jim Hacker being the only other Aggie to get three hits. Kelley was used as a pinch hitter in Saturday's game, and Hacker played the entire series.

A&M scored twice in the second when one of Kelley's two baggers scored Gene Reinarz and a sacrifice fly by Butch Ghutzman brought Mike Frazier home. The Aggies added two more in the fourth when another double by Kelley pushed Frazier and Jim Langford in.

Texas got a pair in the third on a single by Markl and a triple by Chalk which ended up on the plateau in left field. Chalk scored on an infield out. In the fourth, a pair of walks preceded by a strikeout and another walk. A throw to third by Frazier after the strikeout nailed Pyka, who was attempting to steal.

Tijerina singled to left to drive in one run before Markl walked. Chalk singled in another, and Kelley got John Langerhans to ground out to first with the bases loaded. Langerhans holds the Texas record for career home runs.

A&M scored in the fifth on a sole home run by Sandy Bate to the same spot as Englert hit his blast, but the Longhorns got another run to even it again in the sixth. Steve Janda, pitching in relief of Kelley, walked Langerhans with the bases full to push the tying run across.

The two teams traded runs in the seventh with A&M's Karl Bystrom knocking a drive to that same place, right-center, for another round tripper. Texas used a walk, a sacrifice and a wild pitch to set up a run on Clancy's double.

The Aggies came back in the eighth with an inside-the-park homer by Charlie Jenkins, who took over the mound chores from Janda in the seventh. Jenkins hit a long fly which stayed on the ledge underneath the 363-foot marker in right-center. Jenkins ran in with the winning run while the Steer outfielders found their footholds to go up the cliff and attempt in vain to throw him out.

The Longhorns got it going in the ninth after Jenkins struck out Ken Pape and got Clancy to fly out to center. Pinch hitter Gary Erskine singled and Tijerina walked. Markl hit a line drive single to center, but Englert nailed Erskine at the plate with a throw which hit near the mound and got to Frazier with fire to spare for an easy tag out.

The Aggies were behind Saturday, with Texas leading twice in the first on a walk, three base hits. In the second inning, three more singles and another run. The Longhorns one in the fifth on a solo run by Berryhill, and they were to the total in the sixth as Bate fell on the rise in left while trying to guess on the rising spot of a high fly by Markl. The double drove in Tijerina in the fifth Steer tally.

A&M got two runs in the eighth on two singles, a walk, a double, infield out and an error. A fly to Langford, a wild pitch and two-out single by Ghutzman momentarily in the fifth, the two Texas runs in the two frames made it 5-3. A disaster and lack of control in the eighth.

Four consecutive walks and a sacrifice fly, a single, a double, infield out and an error. Texas five runs on only two hits and 10 Longhorns went to plate and four Aggies took turns on the mound.

A&M scored three times in the ninth, while Langerhans kept his versatility by pitching effectively for the Longhorns, though he tired in that walk, walking the first two batters out.

A pinch hit double by Frazier Mike Schraeder brought a run before Kelley and Ghutzman struck out. Lilly drove two in with a single to left, but Langerhans returned to the mound to end the game by striking Englert.

The series gave A&M a 4-1 record, the second highest of wins for an Aggie team in a year. An 11-7 conference netted A&M a fourth place finish.

In a season marred with injuries, freak incidents, and just hard luck, the Aggies looked like a team to be reckoned with at the SWC meet coming up May 22-23.

A&M's sprint medley relay team of Willie Blackmon, Horace Grant, Donny Rogers and Alan Swagerty copped fifth place in a time of 3:18.5, while tough luck hit the mile relay team, whose year's best time of 3:09.2 was disqualified when Grant forgot a new NCAA lane rule that was in effect for the first time this year.

The Aggies have three weeks until the conference meet in which to heal injuries of Scott Jones and Marvin Mills, among others.

Coach Thomas and the track team travel to El Paso this weekend to compete with Texas and Texas-El Paso before returning to College Station for a quadrangular meet with Baylor, SMU and TCU on the 12th and 13th of May.

Thomas feels in order for the Aggies to have an outside chance of beating favorites Texas and defending champion Rice in the SWC meet, all injuries must respond to treatment.
