

Dr. Stewart Fowler

Fowler named head of new research center

Dr. Stewart H. Fowler, head of the Mississippi State University Animal Science Department, has been named resident director of research at the newly established A&M Research and Extension Center at Uvalde.

Dr. H. O. Kunkel, dean of the A&M College of Agriculture and acting director of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, said Fowler's appointment is effective August 1.

"We feel very fortunate to obtain an outstanding administrator and educator of Dr. Fowler's stature," the dean said. "He has demonstrated his ability in a number of important positions and will give positive direction to our staff at the new Research and Extension Center at Uvalde."

Kunkel said Fowler is well known in livestock circles and is no stranger to Texas. The scientist holds a BS degree in animal husbandry from the University of Florida (1947), and a master's degree in animal breeding and production from Alabama's Auburn University (1950).

His doctoral degree in physiology of reproduction came in 1954 from A&M, where he served as an instructor in animal industry.

From A&M, Fowler went to the University of Maryland in the mid-1950's to teach swine husbandry and livestock marketing. He also conducted swine extension activities around the state and was assistant coach of the meats judging teams.

Next came service at Washington State University, where he was animal breeder and swine and sheep specialist. He also taught breeds, swine husbandry, animal breeding and advanced genetics.

Fowler was appointed professor of animal science at Louisiana State University in 1958 as sheep and horse specialist, with teaching responsibilities in reproduction, livestock grading, and sheep and horse production. In 1961, he assumed charge of LSU's purebred beef cattle operations.

He was named head of the Mississippi State University Animal Science Department in 1969, where he taught beef science and livestock marketing in addition to his administrative duties.

Kunkel said Fowler is known for his teaching and research abilities. He received LSU Gamma Sigma Delta Outstanding Teaching Award in 1962, was elected a member of the American Association of Advancement of Science the same year.
