Krueger new head of poultry science

Dr. W. F. Krueger, A&M poultry science professor since 1959, is the new head of A&M's poultry science department.

Krueger is heading the consolidated department of poultry science of the university, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and the Agricultural Extension Service, according to Dr. H. O. Kunkel, A&M's dean of agriculture.

The new department head succeeds Dr. John H. Quisenberry, who retired June 30 after a teaching career that spanned 36 years.

In announcing Krueger's appointment, Kunkel said: "He is a capable and dedicated teacher and researcher. He enjoys international recognition as a poultry scientist through his authorship of an impressive list of scientific journals and the many graduate students he has taught.

"Furthermore," the dean continued, "Krueger is held in high regard by his associates and has the confidence of the poultry industry."

Poultry continues to be an important segment of Texas agriculture with an income of approximately $225 million annually, Kunkel said in emphasizing the impact of the industry.

A native of Riesel, Krueger holds a B.S. Degree in agriculture and an M.S. Degree in poultry science from A&M. His Ph.D. Degree is from the University of Missouri in population genetics and animal breeding.

Krueger served with the U.S.

Army from 1943 to 1946 during World War II. He was principal and teacher in the St. Paul public school at Marlin, and was instructor at Mississippi State University and instructor and assistant professor at the University of Missouri. He joined the TAMU staff in 1953 and progressed to the rank of full professor in 1959.

Krueger is associate editor of Poultry Science and is president of Phi Kappa Phi and a past president of Gamma Sigma Delta. He holds membership in Sigma Xi and Phi Delta Kappa.

He also is a member of the Poultry Science Association, World's Poultry Science Association, American Genetics Association, American Society of Naturalists, American Association for the Advancement of Science and Association of Southern Agricultural Workers.

Krueger is active in numerous professional committees. He is past chairman of the Southern Regional Poultry Breeding Technical Committee and the Committee on Graduate Instruction in the TAMU College of Agriculture. He is a past member of the Graduate Council at TAMU and is a present member of the Texas Poultry Improvement Board. He has authored more than a dozen technical journal papers or publications.

Dr. and Mrs. Krueger have two children.

Ag Communications wins 14 national contest awards

A&M's Department of Agricultural Communications won 14 awards in recent national competition in the American Association of Agricultural College Editors.

Six of the awards were won by the department's Electronic Media Section. These included an excellent rating on a special filmed television feature on 4-H and very good ratings on a radio feature, radio spot announcement, and television spot announcement. Good ratings went to another radio feature and a regular filmed television feature on ultrasonic evaluation of livestock.

Both the Printed Media Section and Publications Section each captured three awards, among them an excellent rating each. The Printed Media Section's top award came for its press service for magazines. The Texas Agricultural Extension Service division of the Publications Section reaped an excellent rating for the annual Extension Service report titled "Extension Advances Progress."

A very good rating went to the Printed Media Section's weekly press service and a good rating to its daily press service.

The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station division of the Publications Section received a very good rating on a grain sorghum research bulletin and a good rating on the 1971 fall edition of Texas Agricultural Progress, the department's quarterly magazine.

The other two awards included a very good rating for an art design created for the 1972 Extension Service Press Day packet and a good rating on a special radio script.

The Department of Agricultural Communications is composed of the editorial offices of the Agricultural Extension Service and Agricultural Experiment Station plus the reproduction and distribution division. The department is responsible for the preparation and distribution of mass media materials and information as well as publications relating to agriculture, home economics and fam-

Reactor gear donated by army hospital

Nuclear reactor research equipment valued at $20,000 has been presented to A&M's Nuclear Engineering Department by the Department of the Army.

Dr. Robert G. Cochran, department head, said the equipment came from Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington, D. C. It has been used in biomedical research at the hospital, he noted, with the program completed and the research reactor deactivated.

The equipment includes airborne radio activation detectors, research graphite and electronic equipment.

ily living, and 4-H and youth.

Dr. William E. Tedrick serves as editor and head of the department. Miss Mary K. Mahoney is associate editor. Heading the various sections are Bill Braden, printed media; Larry Quinn, electronic media; Mrs. Helen Scott, Experiment Station publications; Mrs. Dorothy Holland, Extension Service publications; Bob Cullen, art; Cornell Green, visuals; and Tommy Ryan, reproduction and distribution.
