Dallas restaurateur

Eddie Dominguez is big athletic supporter

By JOHN CURYLO

Would you buy an enchilada from this man?
 Many people have, and, if the past is any indication of the future, many more people will in the years to come.

He's Eddie Dominguez, a 1966 graduate of A&M, who owns and manages the popular Tupinamba Restaurants in Dallas. (See the advertisement on Page 1 of Section Two.)

Known as "The Locator," Eddie was an outstanding basketball player at A&M for two years. He was especially known for his hustle and desires and was noted for performing well in tight situations.

Many long-time observers of Aggie basketball say that the crowds used to come just for the excitement of watching Eddie's fascinating style of play. Those same reports say that everyone was satisfied by the antics of the Lon Morris Junior College graduate.

Eddie's fame is widespread now, and he soon will be featured on the cover of "Southwest Scene Magazine," the Sunday supplement of The Dallas Morning News. The article is one on men's fashions, an area in which Lo Cator is reputed to be an authority.

"I was real glad to hear Eddie's going to be in an obscene magazine," quipped A&M basketball coach Shelby Metcalf. When told that it was "Southwest Scene," not "obscene," Metcalf replied, "Why would they want Dominguez on their cover?"

Few people ever reach the point where they have everything they need in life, and even fewer reach that peak before their thirtieth birthday, but Eddie Dominguez gets everything he wants—and then some.

A 12th Man Scholarship donor, Eddie is one of the leading financial supporters of A&M athletics. He is famous for his wardrobe, travels to all Aggie basketball games, helps extensively with recruiting—and he's quite a fisherman.

One of Eddie's prize trophies is a mounted bass he caught at Caddo Creek Fishing Club in Athens. Fishing ranks among his favorite pastimes, and all of his equipment is top-flight.

"If the boat should turn over when we're fishing," Metcalf says, "we just jump in Eddie's tackle box and paddle ashore. You'd really be surprised at some of the things he has in there."

Dominguez is a passionate sports fan, and the walls of his restaurants are decorated with Southwest Conference football and Aggie basketball pictures. The menus are printed in maroon, and the section listing the American food is titled "Dishes From Aggieland."

Business is good at the Tupinamba, which, by the way, is the name of a Puerto Rican Indian tribe, and it's a rare weekend night that the line of those waiting for a table doesn't stretch into the parking lot in front of the restaurant.

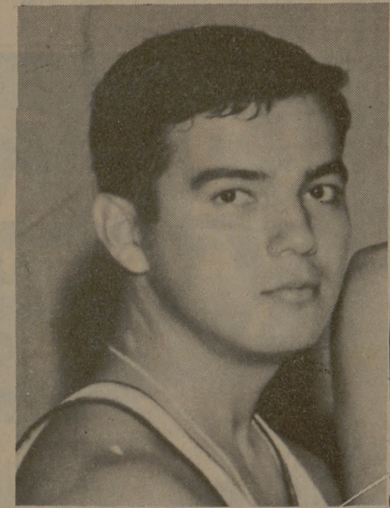

The wait isn't a long one, though, and customers soon are greeted by Eddie and treated to the Mexican atmosphere provided by him and his parents.

The Dominguez family is proud of the restaurant business, and Eddie's Cadillac has the personalized license plate "2P," for their mascot Tupy. His parents' car has the designation "2P2."

Friendship and loyalty are very important to Eddie, and he proves it by sharing everything he has. He's been good to A&M, because he feels A&M has been good to him.

That's pretty good thinking for

Eddie Dominguez

Deadline for applications abolished by new procedures

A&M has abolished its traditional July 31 deadline for students who wish to apply for fall semester enrollment.

"Because of new procedures, this deadline is no longer necessary," noted Dr. John C. Calhoun Jr., TAMU vice president for academic affairs, "and applications will be accepted throughout the year, effective immediately."

Dr. Calhoun emphasized that while students are encouraged to apply as early as possible, anyone who meets admission standards will be admitted to the semester or session he requests until the last day of enrollment, as long as space is available.

The A&M official pointed out, however, the university may be unable to provide the full benefits of its placement, counseling and other standard pre-registration services for students who apply late. Such activities are conducted during a series of two-day conferences beginning in early June and continuing through mid-August.
