

The Allied Chemical Corporation has awarded a $3,000 grant to the A&M Department of Animal Science. The grant is to support the department's overall program.

The presentation was made recently by Ernest M. Harper, general manager of feed marketing with the corporation's agricultural division in Omaha, Nebr., and by R. E. Jones, area manager of Allied's liquid feed division in Houston. Accepting the grant were Dr. L. S. Pope, associate dean of agriculture at A&M, and J. K. Riggs, animal science professor.

Allied Chemical has supported the work of the department for several years through grants and scholarships, Pope said.

95% of the college seniors will be insured within twelve months of graduation. The reason so many thinking men buy life insurance is that it is more than protection against premature death. A research organization found these reasons mentioned 1. Fincial Responsibility 2. Guarantee of a low premium rate for life. 3. Protection against uninsurability & 4. The start of a savings plan. Why wait until you graduate? Take advantage of a program designed for college seniors, The CollegeMaster.

Civilian leaders plan to attend Houston conclave

Developments and ideas applicable to residence halls will be surveyed Aug. 10-14 by 10 student leaders of A&M.

Residence hall presidents and Civilian Student Council members headed by the 1972-73 CSC president, Mark Blakemore of Richmond, Ky., will attend the Midwestern Association of College and University Residence Halls (MACURH) convention at Houston.

The University of Houston will host the affair, set for a theme of "Experience in Participation."

Representing TAMU will be Blakemore; Randy Gillespie, CSC first vice president; Bill Suter, secretary; Philip Glass and Paul Gugenheim, council representatives; Dale Harper, Davis-Gary Hall president; Robert B. Youngblood, Davis-Gary freshman president; William Ouren, Walton president; Ken English, Law president, and Buddy Hale, Pur-year president.

They will be accompanied on the four-day trip by Eugene C. Oates, civilian student activities director.

The convention immediately precedes return of TAMU student leaders to the campus for inauguration of fall semester activities. Classes begin August 28.

The midwest region includes Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, North and South Dakota and part of Iowa. Major conference topics include leadership and leadership training, problem-solving and planning.
