Senate To Open Year With Hot Issue Agenda

By MIKE RICE
Editor

The Student Government of A&M will get things rolling again for the 1972-73 school year as the Student Senate meets tonight at 7:30 in Room 102 of the Zachary Engineering Center.

Highlighting the second meeting of the Senate year will be the establishment of a procedure for replacing yell leaders. This has become necessary since Head Yell Leader C. H. Long resigned his position for personal reasons.

Randy Ross, vice president of the Senate and chairman while it is in session, said no provision was made for this in the recently effected constitution for the Student Government.

Ross added there is no provision for electing or appointing a replacement in the 1972-73 University Regulations handbook or "blue book."

The Senate will also establish a selection process for the 1972-73 Aggie Sweetheart, who is due to be selected later this semester by students.

The A&M student body voted in a referendum last spring to keep the Aggie Sweetheart honor from going to any girl other than an A&M coed. This was done over protests from A&M's "sister school," Texas Woman's University.

Ross said the Senate will discuss various ways of selecting a chairman pro tem for the Senate, in the event he is unable to preside at any of the bi-monthly meetings.

He said no nominations would be taken at this meeting but would be accepted at the next one, Sept. 21. The chairman pro tem will be elected by the Senate and be a full-fledged member of the Senate Executive Committee upon his election.

In other action, Ross said the Senate will discuss the merits of joining the Texas Intercollegiate Student Association and the National Student Lobby with voting.

Fish Tryouts To Begin Wednesday

Fish Yell Leader tryouts will be held Sept. 11, 12 and 13 in the Grove, announced Griff Lasley on Wednesday afternoon.

Lasley said applicants must be in attendance all three days and should report to the Grove at 5 p.m. each day.

Applicants will be expected to know general knowledge and history of A&M along with yells used by the school.

The Fish yell leaders will attend all Fish football games this season and basketball games next spring.

Lasley may be reached at 845-4086 or in Dorm 4, Room 124, for additional information.

Anyone who is not covered by the above should contact Shariq Yosuzi at 5-3051. All tutors should check in with their dorm representatives, said Senior Advisor Yosuzi.

to be done at the next meeting.

External Affairs Chairman Barb Sears will present a resolution to the senators asking that the residents of the new Krueger-Dunn dormitory complex be allowed to make inputs or suggest ideas for the new dorms scheduled to be added in the same area.

Ross said Sears has received a number of questions from students concerning construction faults of the present dorms and these students wish to be of help before new construction starts.

Student Government President Layne Kruse will brief the Senate before the agenda is started to report on policies currently being studied for campaigning on campus.

Approval of student appointments to university committees and judicial appointments by the Senate will also be done at the meeting.

Sears Gives Calhoun List Of Complaints On New Dorm

External Affairs Committee Chairman Barb Sears presented Dr. John C. Calhoun, Jr., vice president of the university for academic affairs, with a list of complaints given her this week by irate students who are presently residents in Krueger-Dunn Halls.

"When the list of complaints reached a substantial 15," said Sears, "I just wondered what kind of dorm Krueger-Dunn was turning out to be. So I began to write them down until I thought I had just about all there could be."

Sears said she is worried about the construction of the next wing of the complex and hopes that university officials will allow students to make sufficient input into its design so there won't be as many problems.

A resolution will be presented by Sears to the Student Senate Thursday night asking that students be allowed to put as much input as possible into the construction of the new wing.

"It seems like the architect has the plans and is pulling hard on the reins to start construction," she said. "And I'm not so sure that he doesn't want to change details in the plans as much as he is anxious to start work."

"I think we should have input now from students who have lived there," Sears said. "I don't think a two week or one month delay will hurt the contractor's schedule irreparably."

Sears noted that this is the best dorm the campus has and its faults are being overlooked because it is so good. "It wouldn't take much effort to change as long as problems are found out about in time," she said.

Among the major problems she cited in her complaint list were the roaches and mice on the second floor of Dunn; the paint on the walls not being able to withstand masking tape while nails for hanging pictures are too low; poor lighting for the mirrors and showers in bathrooms; and too short cords on the telephones.

In addition, Sears pointed out that the courtyards aren't the desirable ones originally presented by the administration for sunbathing because of no grass; inadequate parking for bicycles around the dorms for bikes; power outlets are too low; and the washing machines don't fit the allotted space very well.

Sears said there are numerous other problems she cited to Dr. Calhoun, but noted these were minor and could be ironed out as the dorm becomes settled.

She added Dr. Calhoun assured her the situation is receiving close attention and that every available way of using student ideas would be used in the new wing construction.

Applications For Aggieland Are Being Taken

Applications for Aggieland staff membership are now being taken, announced Joe Arredondo, editor.

"I am interested in finding some yearbook aides who are willing to work for the experience," he said.

There are openings for 10 freshmen aides who will do whatever work needs to be done. Previous experience in yearbook work is preferable, he noted.

There are also openings for five juniors or sophomores who will plan and do layout for several sections in the yearbook. Experience with the mondrian style layout is preferred, but not necessary, Arredondo noted.

Applications for photographers are also being taken.

The applications may be picked up and turned in at the Student Publications office on the second floor of the Student Services Building, or at the Student Programs Office in the Memorial Student Center.

Deadline for applications is 5 p.m., September 22. Interviews will be made shortly after the deadline, Arredondo reflected.

Luedecke Having to Fight Change, Aesthetics To Solve Parking Pains

Editor's Note: This story is taken from a recent interview with Gen. A. R. Luedecke, Executive Vice-President of A&M, and was prompted by the many complaints on the new parking lot being built by the Administration Building. It's intention is to relate some of the problems having to be contended with in finding agreeable places to park cars on campus.

By MIKE RICE
Fighting aesthetics and changing times isn't an easy thing for many people to do, and for Gen. A. R. Luedecke, the situation at A&M isn't getting any better.

Luedecke has the sometimes thankless job of being in charge of the construction projects going on throughout the campus, not to mention the problem uppermost on everybody's mind — parking lots.

Probably the project receiving the most vocalized protests is the one currently getting underway next to the Systems Administration Building and across the street from the yet unfinished Oceanography-Meteorology Building.

Does the general believe that the parking lot justifies taking away the aesthetic value of the Administration Building lawn? On a sentimental basis, he doesn't.

But looking at the situation realistically, he said Wednesday, people can't afford to look at the buildings for their design any more because others making the decisions aren't architects and therefore must look at parking problems on need and location basis.

According to the architect's blueprint, the new lot will be sunk 18 inches below the original surface of the lawn in an effort to partially hide the cars from view upon entrance to A&M from the east.

Luedecke said there will be seven trees planted within the lot and it will be bermed and screened with shrubbery.

He said the lot has been in the works for six to seven years and it is just the price the university will have to pay for opening the Oceanography Building.

"If the building opened and we couldn't park cars of the employees, we would be in bad shape," he said. He pointed out that there are three or four parking lots which are going to be removed in the near future for building expansion.

"We would love to have strictly periphery parking for A&M," said Luedecke, "with only a certain few getting to park on campus. But the problem arises of deciding who is going to park across from the campus or on its very edge."

Luedecke said there are currently four parking areas that are yet to be built, including the one next to the Administration Building.

Lots included in the campus' master plan are those across the railroad tracks at the West Gate entrance; one behind G. Rollie White Coliseum; and one located across from the Coliseum and the Memorial Student Center additions.

"We have explored the idea of multi-layered parking for our campus," said Luedecke, "but the cost is the only thing holding us back. It would cost between $1,180-$1,000 for one space in a three story garage."

Luedecke said this can be interpreted to mean he would have to find people willing to pay around $120 a year for a parking space for approximately 10 years. The general, needless to say, would have a hard time finding those people.

He said it has been suggested on numerous occasions that people be told not to bring their cars on campus. Then their human nature will cause them to find a solution to parking problems.

"We only wish it were that simple," said Luedecke. "If people would begin to realize that cars

Jordan, Utay, 5-1293; William Wade, White; Jane Logan, Krueger-Dunn, 5-5274; Todd Gordan, Moore, 5-2848; Fred Zieche, Walton, 5-2779; David Sent, Crocker, 5-7439; Jim Stocks, Hart, 5-4906; Lynn Barton, Puryear, 5-2178; Phil McGuire, Fowler, 5-1080; Bill Crockett, Dorm 3, 5-4904; and Steve Eberhart, Dorm 8, 5-6985.

Anyone who is not covered by the above should contact Shariq Yosuzi at 5-3051. All tutors should check in with their dorm representatives, said Senior Advisor Yosuzi.

The Controlled Society' Chosen SCONA XVIII Chairman Announces Conference Topic

"The Controlled Society" will be the theme of the 18th Student Conference on National Affairs (SCONA) next spring at A&M.

"It was chosen out of 40 suggestions as a topic that will stimulate a wide range of interest among students and non-students," announced SCONA XVIII Chairman Chet Edwards of Houston. The conference, an annual AMU event that attracts participants from throughout the U.S., is scheduled Feb. 14-17, 1973.

SCONA XVIII speakers and round-tables will focus on the nature and extent of control exercised by government, big business, unions, lobbyists and mass media, Edwards explained.

Delegates also will discuss implications of psychological controls of man's behavior, such as those mentioned in "Brave New World" or advocated by the controversial Harvard psychologist, B. F. Skinner, the chairman added.

Control of individual behavior and large populations of people has become an issue discussed by medical experts, psychologists and politicians, among others.

Ramifications of such actions by leaders in society will have significant and perhaps grave consequences on human value systems, freedom as we now enjoy it and future directions of countries, the conference executive committee agreed.

"That an entire society can be directed to behave in specified ways through application of reinforcement techniques is an attractive possibility to some and a not-so-attractive possibility to those who oppose on ethical grounds the intentional control of people," pointed out Dr. William R. Smith and Dr. Alan R. Waters, SCONA advisors who teach psychology and economics at Texas A&M.

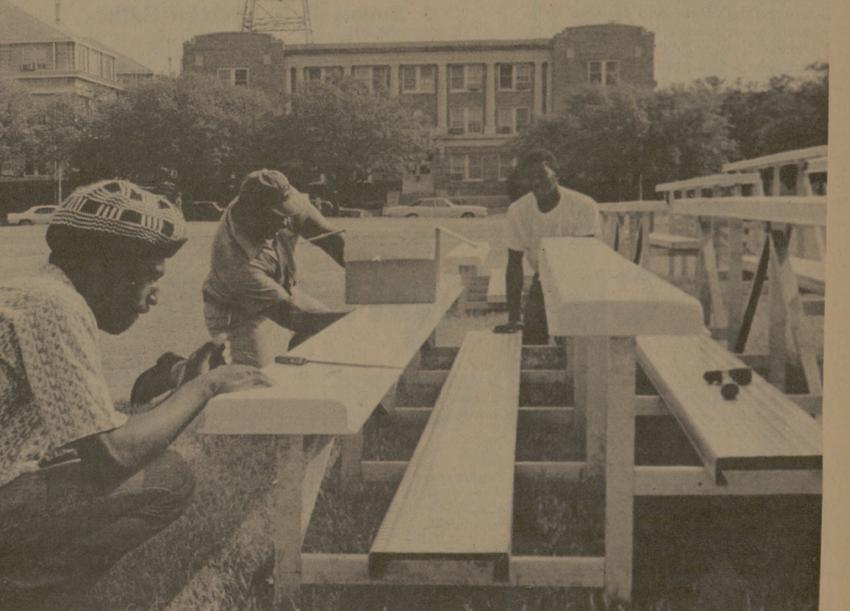

Edwards said students interested in working on SCONA

XVIII should contact executive committee members at the Memorial Student Center Director's office, 845-1914. A variety of interest areas are available.

Planning chaired by Phil Kosub includes steering, public relations and personnel committees. Arrangements, housing, transportation and host committees are coordinated by James A. Lawson, operations chairman.

The SCONA XVIII finance committee is chaired by Gordon Piller. Phillip Smith works closely with Edwards as conference vice-chairman.

TAMU delegates to the 18th conference will be selected in January from applications and interviews.
