Senate Eases By Appointments; Sets Sr. Yell Leader Election

The 1972-73 Student Senate eased through its first meeting of the fall semester Thursday night in the Zachry Engineering Center, passing six resolutions and approving university committee and judicial committee appointments.

As part of old business from last spring, the Senate approved Student Government President Layne Kruse's appointments to the judicial branch of the newly structured government.

Ty Griesenbeck was approved for the judicial branch chairman by a wide majority of those voting. Others appointed to the committee were sophomores Mike Perrin and Keith Tyler; juniors Chet Edwards and Mark Fitte; seniors Shannon Turner and Bill Hatherill; and Dick Zepeda, graduate student.

A ninth judicial member still needs to be appointed. Kruse said any graduate students wishing to seek appointment should contact him Monday in the Student Government Office in the MSC.

With relatively little debate, the Senate then approved the resolution which will provide a special election for the vacant head yell leader post. The resolution specifies that candidates and voters be academic seniors and gives the Judicial Committee review power over disputes in the election.

Debate did ensue over the eventually-approved Aggie Sweetheart resolution which asked that the student body be allowed to vote on the sweetheart after a screening committee had narrowed the field of applicants down to between six and 10.

Controversy on the proposal centered around the two possible methods of picking an A&M coed as the sweetheart. Under the approved method she will be screened first and elected by the students. The alternate method would have had the sweetheart picked by a committee, as has been done in the past.

In other business, senior Nick Jiga (sr.-Arch.) presented the Senate with a proposal which would allow the formation of a Campus Planning Committee.

Jiga's measure brought out numerous questions concerning the so-called "master plan" for the campus. He said, "Bad planning is resulting from different campus factions working separately."

"If we allow the campus to be built badly," said Jiga, "then future students will be unhappy. We, in turn, won't be too happy with the picture, either."

The Senate passed Jiga's measure which will allow the committee to determine the wishes of students and make suggestions to the administration for the overall campus plan.

A committee to study problems with prices at the A&M Exchange Store was approved by the Senate after Darrell Baker (sr.-Arch.) presented a resolution asking to find ways to lower book costs.

Student Trio Attends TISA Convention

Three A&M students left Friday morning for the Texas Intercollegiate Student Association's annual workshop being held in Lubbock at Texas Tech University.

Student Government President Layne Kruse, and his vice-president, Randy Ross, are attending the workshop with External Affairs Committee Chairman Barb Sears to decide whether A&M's Student Government should rejoin after being an inactive member during the 1972-73 school year.

"We need to decide if joining the organization is worth our time and money," said Sears. "But we also want to take part in the workshop sessions and meet student leaders from other Texas colleges and universities."

Sears noted that A&M was very active in the association two years ago when ex-Student Senate President Tom Henderson was the executive-president of the TISA group.

She described the association as a student union of schools in Texas which promotes communication among schools and establishes a means for obtaining common goals.

"Some of the goals have been very dear to many students our age," said the junior committee chairman. "Issues like the fight against the rising cost of tuition and the 18-year-old vote have been worked on quite vigorously by TISA."

Sears said the group is not officially a student lobby but added it "does work very closely with the legislature."

"Since Tom left TISA, it really hasn't done too much," Sears said, "and that is why we aren't committing A&M as a member yet."

The three A&M representatives will be given a chance to participate in a series of workshops which includes legal rights, voter registration, student discount programs and legislative dealings while at the TISA convention.

In addition, state figureheads such as John Tower, Dolph Briscoe, John Hill, Hank Grover and Barefoot Sanders will be guest luncheon and dinner speakers.

"If we like what we see, we will propose a resolution at the next Senate meeting asking that A&M join," said Sears.

TY GRIESENBECK, newly appointed head of the Judicial Branch of the Student Government, took his place in Thursday's Senate meeting, advising senators on the Judicial By-Laws.

Applications Start Monday For Head Yell Leader Spot

A special election will be held for the position of A&M head yell leader on Tuesday, Sept. 19, as a result of Thursday night's Student Senate meeting in the Zachry Engineering Center.

The Senate passed the resolution because of the vacancy created by the resignation of Head Yell Leader C.H. Long for personal reasons.

Applications will be taken for the position at the MSC Student Programs Office starting at 8 a.m. Monday, said Steve Vincent, Chairman of the Student Election Board.

Vincent said the deadline for filing applications will be 5 p.m. Wednesday at the office.

The position is open to academic seniors. According to the Senate resolution, candidates must be undergraduate males with a minimum grade point ratio of 2.250. These are essentially the same requirements as those established for candidates in the 1972 spring election.

Polling places for the election will be at the MSC, Library, Sbsa newsstand and the Guard Room in the corps area. The head yell leader will be selected in time to make the trip to the LSU football game.

Prospective candidates with any additional questions should contact Vincent at 845-4682.

Pioneer Atomic Scientist To Lecture Friday Night

Dr. Alan Walsh of Australia, the pioneer scientist in the atomic absorption concept, will give a graduate lecture at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 8, at Texas A&M University.

His program, "Non-Dispersive Systems in Atomic Absorption Spectroscopy," will be held in Zachry Engineering Center Auditorium 2 under sponsorship of the TAMU Chemistry Department in cooperation with the Activation Analysis Research Laboratory.

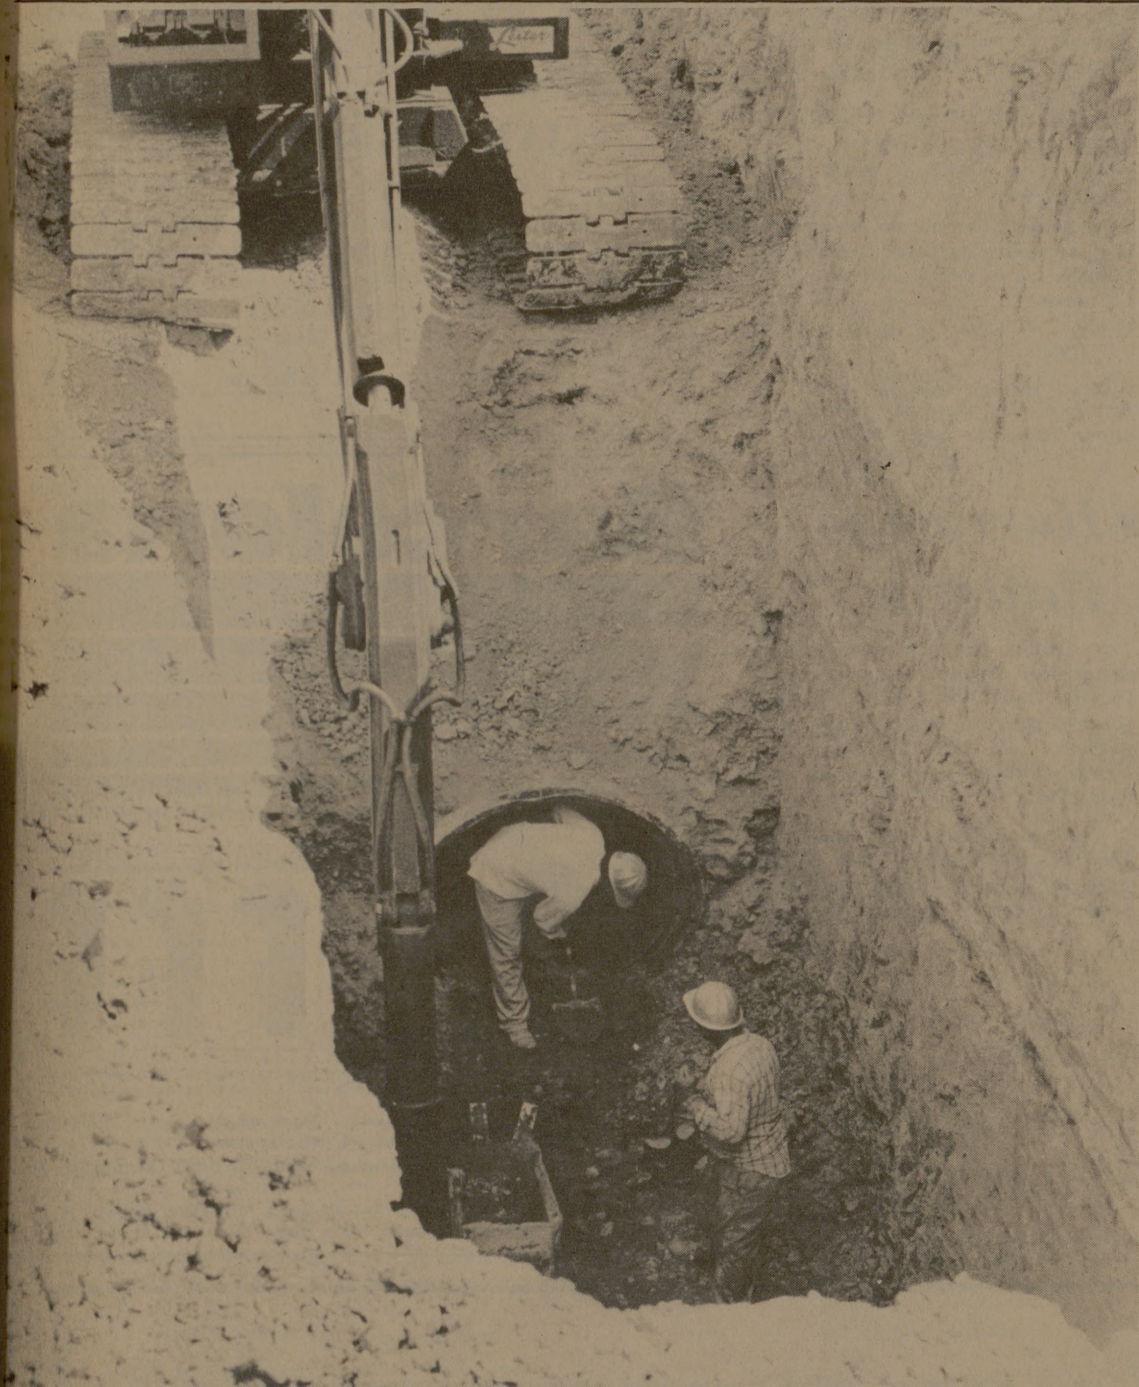

Dr. Walsh first proposed the atomic absorption concept in 1955 and has since been the outstanding leader of this successful technique of chemical trace analysis.

He is in the U. S. to receive the Society for Applied Spectroscopy Gold Medal at the group's annual meeting in Dallas.

Educated at Manchester (England) University, Dr. Walsh in 1946 joined the Spectroscopy Section, Division of Chemical Physics, Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization in Melbourne, Australia.

He was named chief research scientist and assistant division chief in 1958.

Committee Says Extra Bus Needed For Plantation Oaks

The second meeting of the Shuttle Bus Committee was held Thursday to hear reports on current investigations of various ways to include the Plantation Oaks Apartments on bus routes.

Kent Caperton, assistant to President Jack K. Williams, said the committee concluded it would be impossible to include the apartments.

He said the buses are currently being filled before they ever reach the Plantation Oaks Apartments. It would be impossible to include riders from the apartments without omitting some riders from other apartments, he added.

Caperton said the committee decided the only way to include Plantation Oaks in the university's new shuttle bus service is to add an extra bus to the system.

"Funds aren't available yet for such an action," he said. "But a group of students and faculty have been selected to find ways of acquiring funds for the extra bus."

The next meeting of the committee is slated for 8:30 a.m. Thursday in the conference room of the president's office. All persons interested are invited to attend.

Effective Teaching Institute For Teachers To Be Held

An effective teaching institute for teachers of all disciplines will be conducted Oct. 2-3 at A&M in cooperation with the American Society for Engineering Education's Gulf Southwest region.

Participants from throughout Texas and Louisiana are expected for the two-day institute at the Zachry Engineering Center at TAMU, according to Dr. Charles A. Rodenberger, director.

Sessions designed to develop interest, interaction and small group discussion will feature Dr. William Rabinovitz of Penn State; Dr. Gordon Flammer, Utah State; Dr. Gale E. Nevill Jr., University of Florida, and Dr. Joe Biedenbach, with RCA at Camden, N. J.

Student motivation, teaching design, effective testing, evaluation of teaching and media are among discussion topics.

"Effectiveness will be maximized by having each work group contain teachers across the spectrum—young, experienced, all disciplines," noted Rodenberger.
