Nixon Makes Campaign Plans With Top Political Advisors

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon and his top personal and political advisors charted re-election campaign strategy Tuesday, including an accelerated effort to embrace disenchanted Democrats.

As Nixon and his 39 high-level breakfast guests sipped coffee and talked politics in the State Dining Room, state Republican chairmen and directors of state campaign committees were meeting elsewhere in the capital.

The state GOP leaders moved on to a private White House reception after a day of pep talks and briefings from key campaign officials including the Republican national chairman, Robert Dole, and campaign director Clark MacGregor.

Then Nixon headed for his Camp David retreat in the Maryland Mountains for consultations Wednesday with close aides.

The flurry of Republican campaign meetings came precisely

Schink Promoted

Dr. David R. Schink has been named assistant dean for research for the College of Geosciences, announced Dean Earl F. Cook.

Schink, 41, joined the TAMU faculty earlier this year as associate professor of chemical oceanography. He previously served as manager of the air oceans study section at the Palo Alto Laboratories of Teledyne Isotopes.

Dr. Cook said Schink's responsibilities will include coordination of all research activities within the College of Geosciences. In this capacity, he succeeds Dr. Robert R. Berg, who was recently appointed director of university research.

After receiving his undergraduate degree in chemistry at Pomona College, Dr. Schink earned an M.S. in oceanography at Scripps Institution of Oceanography, M.S. in chemistry at Stan-case study.

He will address leading members of the scientific and technical communities working in government, industry, universities and private research institutions during the session on coastal zone management.

The theme of this year's conference is "Application of Marine Technology to Human Needs." A total of 22 separate sessions and 120 papers covering all aspects of marine science and technology comprise the three-day meeting which began Sept. 11. Papers selected by the MTS reviewing committee include two basic types: technical reports on recent experiments and policy or opinion papers dealing with current marine issues.

Willingham is one of few students invited to speak at what has become the principal annual gathering of the U. S. Marine scientific community.

His paper, entitled "Port Planning and Development," deals with improvements which could be implemented in existing ports, using the Port of Galveston as a

Robert D. Scudder of Tyler, right, works with Dr. John A. Wagner of the Argonne National Laboratory in Illinois as a participant in the summer honors research program recently completed. Scudder ran an experiment on the swelling of stainless steel used in reactor fuel rods. The senior nuclear engineering student was among 110 college juniors and seniors selected for the nationwide program.

Kissinger Cancels Sightseeing Excursion; Extends Meetings With Kremlin Leaders

MOSCOW (AP)—Henry A. Kissinger canceled a scheduled sightseeing trip to Leningrad Tuesday night and extended his secret meetings with Kremlin leadership through Wednesday.

Kissinger, who was due to fly to the former czarist capital Wednesday, will remain in Moscow to continue talks with party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko before flying to London and Paris.

A U. S. Embassy spokesman said only that the Leningrad trip "is off" and that President Nixon's national security adviser will continue discussions here until his departure Thursday morning

Physics Prof Awarded $15,000 Grant

Hans A. Schuessler, associate professor of physics, was awarded a Precision Measurement Grant by the National Bureau of Standards, U.S. Department of Commerce.

A precision measurement of the hyperfine structure of stored heavy ions may be the basis of a new primary frequency standard, according to Dr. Schuessler. His grant will be used to assist three experiments that are in progress to measure the hyperfine structure splittings of two isotopic ions of mercury (¹⁹⁹Hg and ²⁰¹Hg).

The Bureau's Precision Measurement Grants, $15,000 each, provide an incentive to scientists in other laboratories to evaluate the ultimate potential of their work with regard to improved precision and higher accuracy.

Other recipients of the Grant were Stuart B. Crampton, associate professor and chairman of the Physics Department of Williams College, Williamstown, Massachusetts, and Brij M. Khor-

State Commission Hits Rockefeller

NEW YORK (AP)—A state commission said Tuesday that Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller should have gone to Attica state prison before he ordered police to storm it to suppress a four-day riot in which 43 persons died.

Rockefeller issued a statement praising the commission for a "monumental job of investigating and reporting," but did not refer to its finding that he should have gone to the prison.

Issued a year after the rebellion — bloodiest in American prison history — the report was highly critical of the prison system, officials who planned the assault, the "vengeful reprisals" against the prisoners, and officials who spread false reports of prisoner atrocities.

The commission also released an 80-minute television program, to be shown Wednesday night on Public Broadcasting Service stations. It includes film of the riot and the storming of the prison, tape highlights from the commission's public hearings, and artist's illustrations.
