CADET SLOUCH by Jim Earle

"This is a startling finding! Since hitchhiking among Aggies has dropped off during the last few years, there has been significant deterioration of thumb muscles as you can see!"

Ever heard the saying "opportunity ignored is experience foregone?" Or how about "opportunity never knocks twice?" I suppose that most everybody has listened to these old axioms, or to others that say about the same thing, at least a few more times than they care to remember. Such truisms remain among the perennial favorites of concerned, forewarning parents as they pack their slightly bored sons and daughters off to the great university.

And with considerably different implications, they are occasionally voiced among upperclassmen while eying a potentially companionable member of the opposite sex. Yet independent of the circumstance in which these old sayings are expressed, they do convey a fundamental truth no less important because the words used to express it are familiar and perhaps a little trite.

In the Texas A&M University community many opportunities exist. One only partially understood or often overlooked altogether is provided by the international students here. We are usually quite willing and sometimes boastfully eager to point out that these students enjoy the marvelous opportunity of study in our university. But we seldom go any further.

We don't often think about the fact that international students should also have the opportunity to experience the American society beyond the immediate Bryan-College Station area. Frequent criticisms notwithstanding, our society does have valuable and humane qualities of which we can be justifiably proud. And a fuller awareness of these strengths by international students can provide an essential leavening for their views of the United States.

Just as importantly, we natives have the opportunity to gain exposure to different ideas and in-

Ticket System Challenged

Editor:

When the lady at the Coliseum ticket office told me Friday that all tickets to the L.S.U. game had been bought Monday by seniors and graduates students, I was shocked. I couldn't believe that so few people could buy so many tickets so quickly.

Also, it does not seem fair to me that they should be able to do so. I say that juniors, sophomores and freshmen have just as much right to go to the game as seniors and graduates. I also feel that graduate students, many of whom probably never did undergraduate work here, should have to buy their tickets from public sources, not student.

I feel tickets would also be more evenly distributed among the student body if everyone were allowed to pick up only his own tickets. When a limited number of tickets are available they should be apportioned evenly to each class with any left over being sold after all have had fair chance to buy them.

I believe it is about time that the university took a look at their present distribution policies, and do away with this discriminatory system.

Exchange Store Funds Applicants To Hold Meeting In MSC Monday

Representatives from clubs applying for allocation of Exchange Store profits will meet Monday.

The meetings will be held at 5:15 p.m. in the MSC in Rooms 2A and 2B for departmental and professional clubs and in Rooms 2C and 2D for non-departmental and professional clubs, said Sanders Letbetter, club aid advisor. "Attendance to the meeting is not mandatory, but we encourage everyone to attend," said Letbetter.

Club representatives can give an explanation of the application for funds, a financial statement and budget sheet for club funds, and an itemized request sheet. These information sheets may be picked up before the meeting Monday in the Student Exchange Center between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Senate Considers Lobby

A resignation from the Judicial Committee has brought about interviews and the need to vote for replacing a graduate student member. Jim Behling will be up for approval for this remaining graduate seat.

The Student Services Fee Allocation Committee will also be appointed in the Senate meeting. The committee draws up a budget for recommendation to the Senate. The Senate will discuss the budget at several meetings, make any necessary changes and submit final recommendations to university officials.

The committee has the responsibility of finding where fees are needed to benefit the student body best. Approximately $900,- 000 will be distributed for the students' best interest each year.

"In the past the committee started functioning so late that it was the middle of the second semester before action was taken towards fee allocation," said Layne Kruse, Student Government President. This year appointments are being made early so studies will not be so late in being initiated.

Senate meetings are open for all students interested.
