Horsemen's Club Formed

Horsemen! Whether your interests are technical, medical, social, performance, halter, rodeo, etc., the Texas A&M Collegiate Horsemen's Association has a place for you.

There will be a general meeting, complete with refreshments, film and constitutional review Thursday in the Animal Industries Building. One need not own a horse or have one in the area in order to join.

This newly formed organization hopes to fill the void many horsemen find upon entering college.

It will further the education of those who cannot take advantage of the available animal science courses at A&M.

Playdays, clinics, trail rides, bar-b-ques and dances are on the agenda for this year. In addition, it is hoped a quarter horse judging team can be sent to a national contest in November.

Sorem Predicts Trends

By PEACE MOFFAT
 AP Newsfeature Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Virginia Sorem's job is to publish 12 books a year showing fashions women will want to buy. Sounds easy enough, but there's one hitch—she has to work over a year ahead of time — forecasting fashion trends long before clothes are off the designers' sketch pads, much less in the stores.

How does she do it? The fashion coordinator, catalog division of J. C. Penny Co. explains: "I talk to a lot of fashion sources, read a lot of domestic periodicals and go to all the fashion showings. Just looking at people helps. And I'm familiar with the mark-down racks at stores—that hasn't sold. Fashion makes sense, too. You don't have to be the smartest graduate of Radcliffe to know that certain seasons will bring on certain colors and styles."

The way fashion trends are born has changed in the past 10 years, Mrs. Sorem says. "There used to be a filtering down process," she points out. "The couture houses in Paris would originate trends that would then find their way across the ocean to New York City and the expensive stores on 57th Street. Eventually, those same looks would end up at the cheaper stores, but it was months after the original had appeared in Europe.

"This started changing a decade ago," she goes on. "People in the United States needed clothes to wear for their active lives. In England, there was an uprising of youth. Fashions started coming from the young people on the streets. As a result, trends today come from all over the world."

According to this fashion expert, today's look has two main ingredients — individuality and a casual manner. "Women don't want to all look alike," Mrs. Sorem says. "Now they can buy separates, put them together and change the look for a job, or for a date."

She attributes this individuality partly to the ill-fated midi skirt. "When designers tried to foist the midi off on us, we found it didn't work. They couldn't make something just to be fashionable. We don't wear our same length, so why women have to wear the same length?"

"The casual look was understood," she goes on. "It doesn't mean torn jeans can actually mean the same care and attention should go into a casual look as a formal one. It means a life style that we're doing today, with don'ts replaced by politeness consideration."

"Now the signs are softer look, in two pieces and pants. I do think we're making a comeback, like cocktail dress. In 1973, going to be a different shoes and sleeves. We will wear their shirts and collar—with just a hint of showing."

Physics Colloquium Features Weed Killer

Ever wonder how a physicist kills weeds?

Dr. J. R. Wayland of A&M's Physics Department will lecture Oct. 5 on "The Use of Ultra-High Frequency Electro-Magnetic Fields to Control Unwanted Vegetation."

The physics colloquium program, which is open to the public, will begin at 4 p.m. in Physics Room 146. A coffee is scheduled at 3:45 p.m.

Dr. Wayland says another title for his talk is "How to Zap a Weed."
