Shoes May Be Hard To Locate, But Not Goalpost

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech "I have a specially-ordered, kicking specialist Don Grimes handmade kicking shoe that is figures shoe size is a relative thing. After all, he wears a size eight kicking shoe, a size nine street shoe and a size 10 tennis

Grimes' foot is small. It is so small, in fact, that sporting goods stores don't stock any squaretoed kicking footware that will exactly the size of my foot," chortles the 5-9, 169-pounder who came to Tech without a scholarship.

Certainly nobody can kick about Don's performances this year. Saturday night against Texas, he tied a Southwest Conference record by booting four Bruce Alford of TCU in 1965.

night was not the first time Grimes had toed four field goals in one game. He did the same thing against Oklahoma as a freshman and was the difference for Tech in an 18-10 victory.

The Lubbock native credits a to do with his success this year. as it is mental. Thus far he has kicked true on Ironically enough, Saturday point at Tech and has a string of 25 straight over two varsity seasons.

"I used to get all excited in the warmup," explains Grimes of his new theory. "I've changed that. Now I kick very little in warmups. My whole new philnew philosophy with having much osophy is not so much physical

"I try to concentrate twice as concentration down before the ball will go over. If the concentration is right, the kick is good."

Grimes, who learned his technique from former Tech kicking standout Kenny Vinyard, is quick to praise holder Jimmy Carmichael and the entire field goal and extra point team as being instrumental in his success.

"I don't worry about my kicking team," he says. "They are holder. He will come up and talk to me and reassure me. It takes my mind off the game and centers it on the kick." The kicking specialist is considered as something of a lonely breed, a man apart, on some teams. Such is not the case at Texas Tech. In fact, Grimes was as upset as any player in the
