To Face Hometown Folks Saturday

A&M's Homer May would like to beat, it is Texas Tech, for a couple of reasons.

The first is that the Aggie tight end played his high school ball in Lubbock. The second is that if the Aggies are going to make any sort of move toward the first division finish predicted for them, they had better get

This will be May's last chance would like to make the most of it. As a sophomore, he caught a 24yard pass which set-up the only A&M score in a 21-7 loss. Last year, his touchdown catch put the Aggies on the board in a 28-7

This year, May's fortunes have paralleled that of the team. He caught a touchdown pass in each of the first two games, then had one fall just out of reach against

If there is one opponent Texas against the Red Raiders, and he LSU which would have given the Aggies the lead at halftime and perhaps have turned the game around.

Then on Friday before the Army game, May came down with a virus and did not play. During that four day bout with the flu, Homer lost between 10 and 12 pounds.

"He's back at full speed," Bellard said. "That lost weight means he's lost some strength and will not be at full speed, how-

May had a 102-degree fever track this year." that night against Army but he had to be with his team no matter at what expense.

May has a lot of bad memories about last year's game with Tech, and he'd like to wipe them out when the Raiders come to Kyle Field Oct. 14. "We were lousier show 47 catches for 854 yards that night than ever before. I and eight touchdowns. His hands could just have died," May ream and speed are above average, and Aggie coach Emory Bellard cautions against letting May's appearance be deceptive. "Homer doesn't have that lean and taut look you normally expect from a tight end. Really, he's not a likely looking athlete, but the fact is he's a very fine player and a darn fine young man."

Getting May back in the lineup is bound to help the Aggies.
