Montgomery County Public Schools' Department of Curriculum and Instruction. Acanfora has never been given a hearing and his requests for reinstatement to the classroom have been refused.

According to the complaint filed today, articles appearing in Washington, D.C., and New York City newspapers Sept. 25 reported that Acanfora, who belonged to a homosexual group while a student at Pennsylvania State University, had been granted teaching credentials by the Pennsylvania State Secretary of Education.

The articles revealed that Acanfora, after his affiliation with the homosexual group became known, had been suspended from student teaching by a district in the State College, Pa., area having a cooperative arrangement with Penn State. He sued the district and was reinstated within a week.

After he graduated last June, the university certification council deadlocked on whether he could meet provisions of state law calling for teachers to be of "good moral character." The DuShane Fund financed his appeal to the State Secretary of Education. Acanfora was a member of the Student NEA.
